I am a quadrillionaire chapter 1907-Star Kingdom.

Central of the Central Sacred Continent.

This was where the Saints Association was.

A short, hunched bald old man was standing in the air, allowing the storm to wash over him whilst feeling the sad atmosphere permeating the world.

Even though he did not look too attractive, and even a little strange, he had a frighteningly high status.

He was one of the rule makers of Star Kingdom and the number one of Star Kingdom, Sid Griswold, the head of the Saints Association.

It would be difficult for anyone to connect such a strange-looking old man with the number one in Star Kingdom and the head of the Saints Association.

Despite this, it was the truth.

At this moment, Sid's eyes flashed coldly.

Even the thunder and lightning between heaven and earth were nothing compared to that.

The rain directly bypassed him and fell onto other places.

The power of a Sacred Saint was too terrifying.

Sid naturally knew what this sudden storm represented.

Someone went so far as to violate the rules set by the Saints Association. Not only did they provoke a Battle of the Saints privately, but they also dared to kill a Saint.

Such an approach was a provocation to the Saints Association.

As the head of the Saints Association, Sid would not allow such internal friction to occur.

Every Saint was a jewel of Star Kingdom.

Any random death would be a major loss for Star Kingdom.

The reason why the Saints Association banned Battle of the Saints was that aside from preventing huge losses and the deaths of countless ordinary people, Saints were also the most important stabilizing force of Star Kingdom.

The frequent occurrence of battles would cause Star Kingdom to lose its stabilizing forces.

This was not a good thing for a civilization.

Once other civilizations invaded them, the consequences would be very serious.

It seemed that these guys had to be given a warning.

Recently, there had been a few of them who had started to get restless.

Especially a certain force headed by Zenon Palmore.

Sid yelled for someone.

Immediately a middle-aged man appeared in front of him. He bowed slightly and called out, "Lord Sid!" "Has anything major happened recently?" Sid asked.

"My Lord, two very young True Saints suddenly appeared in West End, one named David and the other named David Two. Both of them are very strong. They successfully defeated Tai from the Palmore family and Cosmo from the Lightfoot family after a fight in the void," the middle-aged man replied.

"Oh? Two young True Saints suddenly appeared? They could even defeat Tai and Cosmo? David and David Two? What is their relationship? Does the Saints Association have any information about them?" "According to rumors, they look very similar, so they should be twin brothers, and the Saints Association has no information about them. I suspect they must be one of those figures who were living in seclusion to recuperate. After they recovered, they gradually began to come out." "Then let's not worry about them for the time being. First, find out what is going on right now. Who died and who killed them? What is the reason for this, and has it caused any casualties to ordinary people? You must find out everything for me. I want to see who dares to violate the rules of the Saints Association and provoke a Battle of the Saints." Sid growled, his mustache curling from anger.

"Yes, my Lord!" The middle-aged man replied.

"Go! I want to know the answer as soon as possible. If I don't do anything this time, I'm afraid these guys will become more and more presumptuous in the future." "Yes, my Lord!"

After the middle-aged man finished answering, his body disappeared.

Sid straightened his bent waist, looked up at the sky, and furrowed his brows tightly.

His eyes seemed to be able to see through endless distances, seeing things that others could not see.

Nek's death started a storm that lasted one minute in the entire Star Kingdom.

While it was happening, a sadness lingered in the air.

Heaven and earth were crying for a Saint's death.

When all of the major forces saw this, they began making assumptions. At the same time, they were asking around to see who had died and who was so bold to provoke the Saints Association.

Even though the grandmaster of the Palmore family had submitted a new proposal to the Saints Association, he still needed the support of the deputy heads to break the original rules.

Therefore, if someone dared to brazenly provoke the Saints Association right now, it would mean they were looking down on the Saints Association.

To be honest, it would be fine if Saints fought each other if they had any enmity.

As long as they did it in the void, it would not cause too much harm.

Just like David and Tai, and also David Two and Cosmo.

The Saints Association would close one eye to this.

However, this time, a Saint died, which caused a huge commotion.

Therefore, the Saints Association could not allow this.

One had to know that after the establishment of the Saints Association, no Saint had died in Star Kingdom in a very long time.

This incident served as a precedent, so the Saints Association would surely set an example to warn the other forces of Star Kingdom.

After David killed Nek, he did not leave immediately.

He stood his ground calmly.

He could feel the old man's anger and was waiting for the old man to take action.

Since he was here to seek revenge, David would eliminate all future troubles.

If David wanted to leave, Sahar would not be able to stop him.

Even if David left, the Simmons family would do everything they could to find him.

So why bother?

Even though David could feel how powerful this old man was, he was not scared.

Since he was a peak True Saint and he also had the help of two Soulbound Weapons, he dared to make this gamble.

Besides, this old man was still injured.

The two of them stood in the air quietly.

Sahar did not do anything, so David did not do anything either.

David's principle was that if the other party did not insult him, he would not insult them.

However, if the other party did, then he would kill them.

Now that he was at the Simmons Estate, he only killed Nek, the culprit.

As for the other family members, they were only injured, and their lives were not in danger.

Of course, if the Simmons family decided to pester David about this, he would not mind killing all of their cores.

Having said that, they were not at that stage yet.

When someone was in an extreme state of anger, they would calm down.

Sahar was like this.

He never expected this brat in front of him to kill someone.

He thought David would just scare Nek because Nek offended him.

No matter who was at fault, it was normal for a True Saint to go to a PreSaint to demand an explanation after they were provoked.

Plus, Sahar had asked around just now.

The Simmons family seemed to have suffered a huge loss, but none of the family members died. Only some of them got hurt.

It was evident that David did not want to eradicate them and make a scene out of this.

Hence, Sahar was not too bothered.

He thought if he lowered himself and asked for forgiveness, this would end when the other party's ego was fed.

However, the result was beyond his expectation.

Nek, the newly emerged Saint, died just like this.

Plus, he died in front of the founder of his family.
