Chapter 1131 You're Not Fit to be a Father

Kelvin was startled. "Why is that? You should tell her so that she can be more mindful throughout her pregnancy."

Gilbert shook his head gloomily and said nothing.

Kelvin turned to Davian in confusion.

However, Davian shook his head to indicate his puzzlement.

I'm even more confused than you guys. I still haven't even figured out if the madam is pregnant or not,' Davian thought.

Kelvin was befuddled as he watched the man's excited expression turn gloomy.

"Gilbert, aren't you happy that Kisa's pregnant with your child?"

"I am," Gilbert muttered.

In the face of Gilbert's icy confrontation, Christopher could not say a word.

Christopher was reminded of the shabbily-dressed girl that stood in front of his house on a snowy day many years ago.

'She had frostbite on her hands and feet while her face and nose had turned red from the cold. She cried out, "dad," and told me her mom was gone. Back then, I did feel bad for her. Since when did that change? Was it when Carolyn called her a b*stard child and said that her mother was an adulteress? She's said plenty of such things. That's why I subconsciously thought of her as an unclean b*stard child. My contempt toward her did not change despite the DNA test. Now that I think about it, she didn't do anything wrong. I just didn't like her. From the start, I had only thought of Sharon as my child,' he thought.

Gilbert said to him in a cool manner, "Please leave. Even though you're Kisa's father, I won't forgive you for forcefully drawing her blood."

"And Sharon..."

"You can continue talking if you want her to be in jail for a few more years."

Christopher paused and did not dare to continue.

"Get lost!" Gilbert had an icy expression. "In the future, don't say you're Kisa's father. She never had anything to do with the Case family. As for the food and favors you all had given her over the years, I'll translate them to cash and pay you back. In the future, she won't owe you all a thing, so don't try to emotionally blackmail her in the name of family."

"Mrs. Kooper Sr., there's a letter for you."

Madalyn stopped walking, then she turned to the bodyguard in confusion. "A letter? What letter?"

George also looked confused. "Who writes letters these days?"

Then, he turned to the bodyguard and said, "Where did the letter come from?"

"I don't know. An hour ago, somebody slid it into my house. I saw that the letter was addressed to Mrs. Kooper Sr., so I quickly sent it over."

"Someone slid it into your house?" George grew even more skeptical. "That means the person knows you're a bodyguard of the Kooper family. Who could that person be?"

"Let me take a look at the letter first."

Just as Madalyn was about to take the envelope, Gilbert promptly reached out and took it instead.

The familiar handwriting came into view, and Madalyn burst into tears. She looked at the contents of the letter eagerly and said in a trembling voice, "D-David... David is still... He's still alive..."

Gilbert looked at Madalyn and walked over after a while. Then, he softly asked, "What did the letter say?"

Madalyn held it in her hands and said while sobbing, "He asked me to withdraw the lawsuit and let Sharon go."

Logically speaking, this is supposed to be sensational news and should have caused a ruckus in the entertainment industry. Could it be that... Christopher had a change of heart?" Thinking of this, Kisa shook her head mockingly. That's impossible. He ruthlessly drew a tube of blood Jolina quickly ran to open the door. However, she was being cautious. She looked through the peephole before opening the door. "Huh? Why is he here?!" she exclaimed.

"Who is it?" Kisa was puzzled. Jolina did not open the door for a long while. She turned around, leaned against the door, and said to Kisa, "It's Peter."

Kisa was taken aback, "Peter???" She thought that it would be a reporter or Gilbert, not Peter. Thinking of Gilbert, a hint of self-mockery appeared in her heart. Subconsciously, she was still hoping that Gilbert would come and see her.

"Kisa, what should I do? Why is he here?" The knock on the door continued, getting louder and angrier each time. Kisa walked over with a smile and said, "Don't be scared. I'll open the door, and you will stay behind me." Jolina nodded and walked behind her.

just anyone at the door; it was Gilbert. She had not seen him for two days after their morning fight.
However, it felt like she had not seen him for a long, long time.

The man's face was pale, and there was no sign of any emotion. "What brings you here?" Kisa asked in a low voice. With that said, she turned around and walked into the house. Gilbert followed her silently.

"Yo, Mr. Kooper, you're here too?" Hearing Peter's voice, Gilbert narrowed his eyes instantly and frowned in displeasure. He did not expect her house to be so lively. Fortunately, Jolina was there.
Otherwise, Gilbert's thoughts would be all over the place again, seeing Peter in her house, single and lonely.

As if he was afraid that Gilbert would rob him of his food, Peter quickly bit into each piece of bacon, egg, and toast on his plate. Kisa watched as he did that and was dumbfounded. She did not understand his actions. Jolina, on the other hand, snorted contemptuously.

Chapter 1137 Gilbert Is Annoying

Gilbert frowned and was displeased. 'If she wants to go to Oceanville, then just go. Why does she need Peter to take her in? Why does it sound like she's flirting with him?

“Take you in?” Peter was stunned for a moment. “Sure, my family owns many hotels in Oceanville. You can stay wherever you like,” he said boldly.

“Would it be okay if I stay at your place for a few days? I want to meet Mr. Webb Sr.”

Peter was dumbstruck once again. Before he could say anything, Gilbert suddenly voiced out coldly, “It wouldn’t be right for you, a married woman, to stay at the Webb family residence. I’m going there for some business soon. You should just come with me. We can stay at a hotel.”

Chapter 1138 The Daughter-In-Law of The Kooper Family

Gilbert stayed quiet, and the only sound in the room was the sound of Kisa eating. Kisa felt that the atmosphere was getting even more awkward and depressing as she ate. She swallowed the food and asked, “Why did you show up here?” After their fight, their relationship became a little tense. She did not know what to say to him at that moment. Gilbert looked at his phone with his head down and said, “I’ll tell you when you finish your food.”

Kisa pursed her lips and stopped talking. She lowered her head and continued eating breakfast. She finished her toast, bacon, and eggs and got up to clean the dishes, ignoring the man beside him. Gilbert watched her grab the plates and got up to follow her into the kitchen after a while. Leaning against the door, he saw her washing the dishes in silence. After Kisa was done, he suddenly said, “Come back to the Kooper residence with me later.”

Kisa froze when she was in the middle of putting the plates away. “No, I’m fine here,” she said softly. She had already searched David’s room and found the clues she was looking for. There was no need for her to go back to the Kooper residence.

"You lost your child, but I lost my great-grandchild. I didn't even blame you for not protecting them. It's better if you shut up before you question me," Madalyn said. Kisa stared at her heavily while secretly clenching her hands. To her, Madalyn used to be extremely open-minded and knew right from wrong. However, the more she hated Kisa, the more unreasonable she became.

"Before you blame others, you should ask yourself why you didn't protect your own child." Madalyn got up with the help of her cane, walked slowly in front of her, and said with a cold face, "I told you a long time ago not to go on set. I told you that you should stay home and take care of yourself for the baby, but you didn't listen. You knew that Sharon had always been at odds with you. You should have kept your guard up, but you still fell for her tricks. The child is gone mainly because of you. If you think Sharon shouldn't be forgiven, then you shouldn't be forgiven too."

Kisa's heart was full of ridicule. Madalyn's principles were distorted because of her hatred. "Good thing I'm not pregnant," Kisa sneered.

Chapter 1140 Don't Wear Pants Like These Anymore

Kisa noticed that Gilbert was staring at her waist, and the expression on his face was not looking good.

Kisa was baffled.

She then put her sweater down uncomfortably as she asked him, "What are you looking at?"

"Don't wear pants like these anymore!"

The man finally spoke, and his tone sounded a little commanding. "And, don't ever wear heels again!"
"Why?"

"They don't look good!"

Kisa immediately got frustrated. She thought she looked really good in them.

"I'm not wearing that for your eyes anyway. Just look away if you don't like it."

"I'm not blind. Where else could I be looking if you keep walking in front of me?"

Gilbert said flatly before he continued judging her outfit. "Anyway, just stop wearing pants like these from now on. It's so tight, and your legs look like they can barely fit in there. Also, why are you wearing heels when you're already so tall? Not only that the heels don't look good, but they're very noisy when you walk too."

Kisa's expression darkened. 'Those are his reason?
