Chapter 1075

After the Callahans learned that James was succeeding the position of Emperor in three days, they became incredibly high profile.

Meanwhile, Yaroslav had gone to seek his leader.

However, he did not even get to see him.

Yaroslav was unsure why the leader refused to see him now but made a guess that he had been abandoned and was to become a sacrifice just like the Emperor. He refused to give up and die like this.

After returning to his courtyard, he immediately called Madelyn.

"Come to the Capital right now."

Madelyn never returned to Cansington.

Instead, she was trying to find out the identity of the person helping Mr. Gabriel but to no avail.

After receiving the call, she hurriedly headed over.

Yaroslav fueled his coal fire inside a room of the courtyard house while Madelyn stood aside respectfully.

"Mr. Gabriel."

Yaroslav looked at Madelyn and asked, "You didn't return to Cansington?"

Madelyn nodded and said, "Yeah. There's more to James than the surface. The Emperor fought with him for so long and still got beheaded. I've been secretly investigating him. What happened, Sir? You were in a hurry for me to return." "Madelyn, I need you to tell me how I can protect myself right now."

Yaroslav looked worried.

Hearing this, Madelyn was stunned.

Yaroslav pointed to the sofa and said, "You can sit while talking."

Madelyn sat down and asked, "Sir, don't you already have a plan? I thought James wasn't a threat to you?"

"Madelyn, there are many things you don't understand. My faction has complicated relationships, and many people are behind me. I'm just a puppet that's been pushed into the light to carry out their plans. If necessary, I'll also be sacrificed. James has succeeded the Emperor's position, and his current strength..."

Yaroslav sighed and continued, "A reliable source told me that James disguised as the old man that hurt Donovan at Mount Little root."

Madelyn immediately exclaimed, "Impossible! That couldn't have been James. How could he have grown so strong in such a short time?"

"It's true. How should I protect myself now?"

"Mr. Gabriel, where did you get this information from?"

Madelyn looked at Yaroslav.

"Don't ask about it. It's no good for you to know too much."

Hearing this, Madelyn fell into deep thought. Then, she asked, "Mr. Gabriel, have you really been abandoned? You've been the main person in charge and have done so much over the years. You've had absolute power in the organization. Would they abandon you like this?"

Yaroslav sighed.

"Yeah. Some sacrifices must be made to achieve great things, but I don't want to go down so easily. The only person I can count on is you. James is going to kill me. After I die, James won't have another target. Thus, the Capital will temporarily be in peace. However, the situation will be different after the Mount Thunder Conference."

Yaroslav looked helpless. He was unsure of what the leader was planning right now.

The Mount Thunder Conference would be critical, and nothing could go wrong before it.

James wanted to kill him so that more people would expose themselves, which was why he was now abandoned. If he died, others would not dare act rashly. They would wait patiently for the Mount Thunder Conference to arrive.
