Chapter 3657

It was difficult for anyone to believe what he had just witnessed without seeing it for themselves.

The red-haired man felt like no one would believe him even if he told them about everything that happened.

They would think he was crazy, if anything.

The round-faced man noticed that the red-haired man still looked shocked, and he started to feel anxious.

He reached out and lightly patted the red-haired man. At that moment, he regretted letting his curiosity take over. He was not thinking about the red-haired man's condition at all.

The red-haired man was probably traumatized, and the memory might just torture him.

Just as the round-faced man was consoling the red-haired man and planning on telling him he did not need to answer, the red-haired man finally said, “What kind of treasure do you think fifteen skeleton badges would get you?”

The moment he said that, everyone was stunned.

He had not been able to speak for so long, but that was the first thing he asked?

Someone coughed and answered seriously, “It should get you a treasure that’s at least worth seventy million, or even over a hundred million. Ever since the fog battlefield started, no one has ever gotten so many skeleton badges.”

The fog battlefield was unique compared to the other challenges.

First of all, they needed to kill the other challengers to get rewards. Then, there was that fog that blocked sight and sound, which made it harder to find other challengers. Even managing to find seven or eight was already incredibly lucky, let alone all of them.

Of course, a person would first need to have the skills to ensure his survival, even if he was lucky. The highest record from the fog battlefield was 13 skeleton badges. It meant that one challenger had managed to kill 13 others.

The red-haired man took a deep breath. Looking aghast, he gulped and said, "You probably wouldn't believe me even if I told you everything. I don't have to tell you either, you'll see what happened later..."

Everyone was confused by what he was saying. They did not know what could have happened that they would not believe.

Right after that, the red-haired man even said that they would see what happened soon. It was a strange thing to say, and everyone was curious.

Right at that moment, the transfer array lit up again. A dark-green figure walked out of the transfer array.

The masked man looked incredibly impressive as he walked out. Compared to the shocked red-haired man, he was much calmer.

Everyone was stunned when they saw the person. Practically all of them had their eyes wide as they gaped in disbelief.

It was Frank.

“He survived! Goodness, I thought he’d die in there! What the heck is Case doing? How did Case let him live after everything that happened?”

“I’m starting to respect this guy a little. When they signed up, he looked so calm, like nothing would affect him at all. Even after being sent out of the fog battlefield, he still looks like that. It’s as if nothing happened inside at all. I doubt it’s that simple. Something unexpected must’ve happened.”
