After that person said that, he turned to look at the red-haired man only to see him with eyes widened.

The man's whole body was trembling, and his expression was a bit twisted. It was as if he was affected even more.

Slowly, everyone started to notice how strangely the man was acting.

When the red-haired man first walked out of the array, even though he looked like he was shocked, he looked relatively 'normal'. Ever since Rose walked out of the transfer array, however, the man looked like he was looking at a ghost.

His whole body was trembling. It was obvious that something was wrong with him. There was a stir among the warriors there. Everyone was incredibly curious.

Some of them scratched their heads, wondering what happened for the red-haired man to be so emotional. They wondered why the masked man was able to leave the fog battlefield in perfect condition as well.

It was as if he had not entered the fog battlefield but his own garden. He had just left after a leisurely stroll.

Rose took a deep breath and slowly walked out of the transfer array. He did not care about how everyone else was looking at him at all. He walked with an even pace.

About 10 meters away from the transfer array was the Cloud Platform where the skeleton keys could be exchanged. It was noticeably smaller than the Stage of the Nine in Chaos City.

However, the materials used to make the platform looked much more expensive. It was completely adorned with precious metals and jewelry.

Everyone looked on as Rose walked over to the platform. After that, he calmly took out 15 skeleton badges and put them on the platform.

At that moment, everyone's eyes looked like they were about to pop out of their sockets as they all gasped. They could not believe what they were seeing!

Not only had Rose safely left the fog battlefield, but he even had 15 skeleton badges. This was insane!

The fog battlefield's record was 13, and Rose had broken it.

Furthermore, Rose seemed so calm as if he was just taking out 15 spirit crystals, not 15 skeleton badges.

Everyone's chest heaved, but apart from the anxious breathing, the whole place was silent. It was just too unbelievable.

Was this reality?

Not only did they see someone break the record, but he was even from a third-grade world. He had even offended 15 opponents right before that!

15 opponents?

15 skeleton badges?

As time passed, everyone slowly understood what happened.

A total of 15 warriors from the Swelling Tide Continent had entered the fog battlefield. They had gone in to kill Joe, not for any badges. However, after the fog battlefield closed, the one supposed to be killed was alive and even had 15 skeleton badges on him.

It caused all of them to have a bold thought in their minds, but the thought was just too crazy. They even started to feel their hearts beating rapidly just thinking about it.

Someone said, “Fifteen skeleton badges... That’s peculiar... Did the masked man really kill fifteen opponents? Did he happen to pick up a golden opportunity somewhere? Can someone tell me what happened?”

“There’s no way anyone could be so lucky! Don’t you think this is just too strange? The masked man is too calm; it’s as if all his problems are solved...”
