Chapter 131

Azure Group had only been founded recently, so they didn't have many employees. The two young women in charge of the exhibition were merely interns. They had never been to such a grand event before, and had exercised caution the whole time.

"I'm so sorry, Sir. Miss Everheart is a very busy person. If you have any issues you'd like to bring up, please inform us instead."

"Fine then!" The man scowled. "The Global Technology Summit has provided a list of mandatory requirements for participating companies of this annual exhibition. Not only has your company only been established less than a year ago, you don't even have any independently produced products! Clearly, your company does not meet the requirements. I'm giving you three minutes to get out of this exhibition hall, or I'm calling security!"

"B-But we received an invitation from the summit, which means that they allow us to participate. If you chase us out now, doesn't that mean you're going against the organizers?"

Hearing the intern talking back to him, the large man felt so humiliated that his whole face turned red in rage. He kicked down their board and bellowed, "That was before! This is the present we're talking about! If the higher-ups won't allow you to participate, then it's final! If you refuse to cooperate, then don't blame me for taking matters into my own hands!"

After that, the man used a walkie-talkie to summon a group of security guards, ordering them to smash up Azure Group's exhibition area in order to force them out.

There were quite a few people from the industry crowded around them, but none lent them a helping hand. Instead, they seemed happy that such misfortune was dawning upon the small company. The truth was that the people working in internationally renowned big enterprises despised their existence. They figured that small companies like Azure Group would only be sully the name of the summit.

"Well you can certainly try! I dare you!" Renee walked over to the crowd, her head held high and eyes blazing. Although her lovely voice wasn't loud, her powerful aura was more than enough to compensate for it.

"Miss Everheart!" The two young interns immediately hid behind their boss. Although they'd only been working for her for two weeks, they were thoroughly impressed by Renee's capabilities.

They looked at Renee like she was some kind of invincible warrior, and were quick to explain the situation to her. "This guy keeps saying we have no right to participate in the exhibition, and he's trying to chase us out! He even threatened to smash our exhibition if we don't cooperate!"

"So you're the one in charge, huh?" The large man behaved more arrogantly when he realized that Renee was just a woman. "Stop dilly-dallying then! Get lost, and take your rubbish with you!"

Renee absolutely resented bullies, especially those who stepped on the weak to feel good about themselves. Her gorgeous face was now as cold as ice, and she clenched her jaw. "Apologize. On your knees, right now. Maybe it's not too late for you just yet."

"What did you say?" The man thought he was imagining things, and his features twisted in outrage. "Do you "Do you know who I am? I can force you out of this industry with just a snap of my fingers if I wanted to!"

"Why would I know a nobody like you? No matter, I'll allow you thirty seconds to introduce yourself," Renee said calmly, checking the watch on her wrist.

Her dismissive attitude was pure insult in the man's eyes. He grabbed Renee by the collar, scowling horribly. "You have a death wish, don't you?!"

Renee looked down at the hand in front of her neck. "Take your filthy hands off me."

"How dare you talk back to me?" The man intended to teach her a lesson after being humiliated in front of everyone. He raised his hand and brought it down harshly towards Renee's cheek.

Suddenly, everyone heard a loud cracking noise, like a bone fracturing.

"Ah!" Everyone was silent as a horrible scream echoed through the halls.

Chapter 132

Everyone thought Renee was doomed, only to realize that the scream had actually come from the large man's mouth.

"Ah! My arm is broken! It's broken!" The man howled in agony, but still had the strength to continue threatening her. "You wretch! You should know that I'm the head of security for this summit! Anyone in the industry would know to give me the utmost respect... Now that you've provoked me, I'll make sure you and your company are wiped from this plane of existence if it's the last thing I do!" He snarled, his eyes bulging in fury.

Renee loomed over the man, crushing his shoulder with her foot this time. "I'm counting to three. Apologize to me and my employees, or I'll break your other arm too."

The man was quite unwilling to admit defeat at first, but as Renee stepped harder on his shoulder, he felt as if his arm was about to be dislocated.

Chickening out, he yelped in pain. "I... I'm sorry! I was wrong for behaving like that! I was wrong! Please let me go!" As more people gathered, the gossip and discussions increased.

"Who is this woman? How could she possibly dare to provoke Jason Scott, of all people?"

"Isn't he Stefan Hunt's employee? Is she trying to get herself kicked out of this industry?!"

"I heard the summit is going to elect a new president soon, and that person is the largest investor of this exhibition!"

"Yeah, I heard they're close to Stefan Hunt too! Looks like this company is going to be closed down! They're done for!"

Hearing the gossip around them, the interns trembled with fear, and whispered to Renee. "Miss Everheart, this person is Mr. Hunt's employee! We can't afford to make an enemy out of him. Why don't we just apologize to him now? Let's beg him to let us go, and to not ostracize Azure Group in the industry!"

The name 'Stefan Hunt' was truly a trump card in Beach City. The name itself was more powerful than the law, as no one could ever imagine offending the legendary man himself. So, logically speaking, if Jason was Stefan's employee, Azure Group was surely going to have a hard time later on.

Renee finally came to the realization as well, scoffing. "Oh, so that's it. I was wondering why our invitation was suddenly revoked.

So, a certain someone was playing tricks behind the scenes.'

The woman lifted her leg from Jason's shoulder and said, "Tell Hunt he should come at me directly if he has something to say. It's childish to play tricks on me behind my back! Who does he think he is, using a public event like this to take revenge on me?"

Suddenly, the noisy hall turned silent as the crowd parted respectfully. It was obvious that a powerful figure had shown up.

Jason, who was a mess on the ground, looked up with much effort. His eyes widened. It was as if he had seen his savior, and he crawled over to the figure with his broken arm.

"Mr. Hunt! You're here! I did as you said I tried to make them leave! But this woman has the audacity to refuse! She even openly challenged your authority! If you don't teach her a lesson, she'll trample all over you and H Group!" Jason figured that Stefan would stand up for him, since he had personally appointed him as the head of security.

Stefan was no longer as s*y as when he had just gotten out of the shower. Wearing a neat gray suit, his hair was brushed back, enhancing his beautifully defined features. He had the potential to be a model, and was born to be a leader through and through. The man was able to strike fear in people's hearts without even saying a single word.

Stefan dismissively glanced at Jason, who was currently whimpering at his feet. Then, he turned to look at Renee and asked you do this to his arm?"

riously, "Did

"I did. He deserved it!" Renee said defiantly, already prepared to fight. She lifted her chin arrogantly and declared, "If you'd like to avenge him now, go right ahead!"

"Hah, you're in for it now! Mr. Hunt will definitely make your life a living hell!" Jason said gleefully as he held onto his broken arm. Despite the pain causing him to break out in a cold sweat, just thinking about Renee's horrible fate delighted him.

He then turned to Stefan, trying his best to flatter him as much as possible. "Mr. Hunt, why don't we take this matter into our own hands? An eye for an eye, right? Let's break all her limbs so she won't tarnish our industry's good name!"

"Breaking limbs, huh?" Stefan's eyes glinted dangerously. "That does sound like a good idea."

Renee felt chills run down her spine. She didn't expect him to be so cruel! 'We used to be married! Even if it really was for the sake of hiding his sexuality, I was still his wife! He doesn't have to go this far...'

Jason immediately started acting cockily, pointing towards the guards and shouting, "What are you doing just standing there? Did you not hear Mr. Hunt? Break all of her limbs! Let's see if she'll be so arrogant then!"

Just as the guards were about to take action, Stefan strode towards Jason and kicked him right on the chest, sending him flying backwards.

Stefan looked furious, not sparing Jason even the slightest glance as he ordered the security guards, "Break all of his limbs."

Jason was terrified, and the blood drained from his face. "Mr. Hunt, what... What do you mean by that? What have I done wrong?"

The large man wasn't the was

y one who was confused. Everyone at the scene, including Renee,

Jason was terrified, tugging on the ends of Stefan's pants and begging for his life. "What did I do wrong, Mr. Hunt?! I did what you told me to! At least give me an explanation!"

Stefan narrowed his eyes, his gaze lowered menacingly. "I told you to ask her to leave, I didn't say to kick her out. If you can't understand basic orders, you are useless to me."

The guards weren't foolish enough to overlook Stefan's implications, and knew what they needed to do at this point. Soon enough, Jason was dragged away, his haunting screams echoing down the hallway.

The rest of the crowd didn't dare to gossip about Stefan either, so they quickly dispersed. Soon, the exhibition hall was silent again.

Stefan was still standing in place, staring at Renee coldly. Despite not saying a word, his piercing glare was very intimidating.

The woman, however, pretended as if Stefan didn't exist. She quickly instructed the two interns to tidy up their exhibition area, which Jason had previously messed up. "That screen is broken, so call the company's logistics department and have them send over a new one as soon as possible..."

As the interns knew all about Stefan's power and status, they quickly got to work, not daring to even lift their heads. At the same time, their admiration for Renee only grew, especially since their boss didn't even care about how influential Stefan was. 'She's so cool! I can't believe it!'

Stefan obviously didn't enjoy being ignored and approached her, grabbing Renee by the wrist. "Don't tell me you're actually serious about this."

Renee frowned, feeling slightly perplexed. "I don't understand what you mean, Mr. Hunt."

"You and that Osborne kid established this shell company, and stole H Group's largest client from us. You're only doing this to make me mad, aren't you? Well you've achieved your goal, so why keep up the act?"

Renee finally realized what he meant. She scoffed and said sarcastically, "Stefan Hunt, do you really think Liam and I established Azure Group because of you?"

"What else would you be doing all this for?" Stefan demanded, staring straight into her eyes. You took my lawyers and established a company to rival mine, so what could your motive be other than revenge?"

Chapter 134

"I'm clearly doing this because..." Renee paused, then grinned mysteriously as she half joked, I want your money!"

Stefan now looked rather speechless. He could tell that the woman was being dismissive, and her reply basically gave him no information on the situation.

"I told you that you can ask me for money if you need it. We were husband and wife, so I'll definitely try to satisfy your financial needs as best as I can. You don't have to beat around the bush when it comes to things like this."

"Just ask you?" Renee smiled sarcastically. "What if I said I wanted half of the Hunt family's wealth? Would you be willing to give that to me?"

Hearing this, Stefan's expression darkened. "That's ridiculous!"

"Aw, and here I was thinking that my ex-husband was so generous. Looks like you're still going to be stingy when it comes to paying up. You can't even afford this little request..."

Although the man looked exceedingly upset, Renee didn't seem to be worried about irritating him further. "You don't know me, okay? I'm really greedy. Those few millions may be enough for others, but not me!"

After all, she was going to be a single mother of two soon. She needed to be extremely mindful of her financial situation. She wanted to be just as rich as Stefan, so her children wouldn't regret being under her care as they grew up.

Stefan had never expected his gentle and obedient wife to be this greedy and demanding. However, her 'greed' seemed rather motivational as well. She didn't want anything handed to her. On the contrary, she wanted to waste the time and effort to 'steal' from him.

He wasn't quite sure how to feel about the situation, with both disdain and admiration for the stubborn woman warring inside him.

"You naive woman... Do you really think taking my lawyers, and signing a contract with South Group will make everything easier?" Stefan warned with a serious expression.

"The business industry is like a warzone, it's not like playing house. If you're not careful, you might get yourself tangled up in something you can't get out of. You haven't forgotten how your family ended, have you?"

The man's words hurt Renee deeply, and she clenched her fists tightly. She definitely knew the dangers of the business industry. The Everheart family was once one of the Great Eight of Beach City as well. Yet, in the blink of an eye, their glorious reign had crumbled to dust before her. Renee actually still remembered how their enemies would push them to the edge. However, she did not wish to relive those memories anymore...

Stefan's sharp eyes noticed the pain in her expression, so he spoke a bit more gently, "I heard about the harsh requirements South Group asked of you. They need you to hit eight billion in sales, right? Do you know how much pressure that would be for a small company like yours? You can never achieve that within the given time frame!"

"I would know if I can achieve it or not, alright?" Renee retorted bitterly.

"Don't act tough in front of me. You're my ex-wife, and we aren't holding any grudges against each other. I don't want to see you fail, or you'll just be humiliating me along with you." Stefan pretended to be cruel to hide the fact that he was actually concerned about her.

Renee didn't realize that he was worried about her; all she heard was his arrogance and contempt. She chuckled coldly and asked, "So, Mr. Hunt, what are you trying to tell me?"

"To put it simply, you're not cut out for this field, and you don't even have the basic knowledge to run a business, so stop messing around. I'll give you a generous amount of money, so you can just enjoy your life as you like," Stefan replied bluntly.

In his opinion, she shouldn't have entered this industry to begin with, knowing just how dangerous it could be. Back when they were still married, the Hunt family was Renee's biggest protector. No one would ever dare to cross her, let alone take advantage of her.

'And yet this stupid woman was so excited to officially announce our divorce! She was basically making herself a living target for the public. She should just remain a pretty little flower in a garden, and stay away from the battlefield. That's the safest option. All she needs to do at this point is enjoy life.'

П

Renee, meanwhile, found it insulting that he proposed 'protection'. She responded heatedly, "Don't judge a book by its cover, Mr. Hunt. You'll soon see if I'm cut out for this field or not!"

"You stubborn woman!" Stefan didn't mind playing the bad guy at this point. "Then don't mind if I team up with the summit to boycott Azure Group!"

Chapter 135

Seeing that Renee refused to give up, Stefan didn't try to persuade her anymore. He just turned around and left with a cold expression on his face.

When he returned to the very center of the summit forum, he instantly caught everyone's attention. Stefan turned his head slightly, speaking to Elijah who was standing behind him. "Inform Wyatt Haughey to publicly announce that the summit will be blacklisting Azure Group. All companies, and I mean all companies, are banned from partnering with them!"

Not only did the annual Global Technology Summit provide the top companies a platform to promote their products, the most important section within the summit was the forum. With big shots from different countries gathered in one place, they would all discuss the future development of the industry, similar to a conference meeting.

As the CEO of H Group, Stefan's electronics company accounted for seventy-five percent of the market, so he was definitely considered the most powerful of them all.

"I'm afraid that won't be possible." Elijah gulped, replying carefully, "There's a rumor circulating that Wyatt Haughey won't be re-elected this year, so he might not have the power to publicly announce which company he wishes to blacklist." (1)

Wyatt had been the president of the Electronics Technology Association for years, so his position granted him quite a significant amount of power as well.

All companies had to request for approval from the association before joining the industry, and the president was the official spokesman of the association. Hence, it wouldn't be an exaggeration to say that one word from the president would be able to determine one's fate within the industry.

For the past few years, the president of the association had always been Wyatt, who had been trained by Stefan himself. This was why H Group could receive so many permits within the field. If there had been an election within the association this year, Wyatt would have definitely been re-elected, logically speaking.

Elijah's words made Stefan narrow his eyes. "He won't be re-elected?"

"Yes." Elijah nodded and explained, "There were many big shots who were in the running for president in the association, and Wyatt just seemed rather average compared to them, even with H Group backing him. However, it is rumored that the newly appointed president is much more powerful, as they had received a vote from Mr. Y himself. That's how they were able to win against their rivals, and emerge as the new president."

"So that guy came to join in on the fun too." Stefan raised an eyebrow, pondering to himself.

Normally, all the most powerful figures within the business field would cast their votes to support the candidate they wished to have as president.

Mr. V was able to become a legend within the industry through his great intelligence and abilities. With that, he had earned himself the power to make the decisive vote regarding the presidential elections in the association. Despite that, Mr. Y had always been quite mysterious, and had never involved himself in any past elections. He had also been rather low-key for the past couple of years, and no one knew where he had disappeared off to.

Why is he so active this year?' Stefan thought, unable to hide his curiosity towards the newly appointed president.

Elijah then continued. "Don't worry, Mr. Hunt. No matter who the new president is, I'm sure they'd know what to do. If you intend to blacklist Azure Group, surely they wouldn't try to go against your wishes. I'll pass on your message to the new president later. Today marks the day Azure Group meets their demise!"

Elijah knew exactly why Stefan was so resentful towards that company. Not only had his ex-wife established this company with her 'affair partner', they had even stolen H Group's biggest client. 'If I was Mr. Hunt, I'd make both of them go bankrupt! Blacklisting their company is just too light of a punishment!"

As the forum officially started, the hall was completely silent.

After Stefan made his opening speech, the emcee announced with excitement, "As you all know, recently, our association had our presidential elections. So, it's my greatest honor to welcome our new president to the stage!"
