

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1661

Chapter 1661

Suddenly, the mountains, rivers, and earth trembled as if an earthquake was about to occur.

The animals in the forest became terrified and frantically fled into hiding.

After James had let out his desperate yell, he gradually calmed down.

He picked up the Primordial Dragon Blade stuck in the ground and planned to leave.

Swoosh!

Just as he was about to leave, a figure quickly sped toward him from a distance and showed up before him.

James looked at the unexpected guest that had shown up.

It was Sky.

Sky's appearance had changed drastically from a year ago.

He looked like he had aged a lot in the time James had seen him last.

His skin was wrinkled, and he looked significantly older.

During the past year, James had met Sky several times.

Every time they encountered one another, Sky would appear older and older.

When he saw Sky's appearance, James' brows furrowed together slightly as he said, "You must've absorbed too much energy from others. Since your body has taken in too many sources of external energy, it has disrupted the balance in your body and caused you to age rapidly. You can't continue doing this anymore, or else you're going to die very soon."

"Enough with your nonsense, James."

Sky glared at James and spat, "I lost to you three months ago. However, I've already ascended the Skyward Stairway's Ninth Stair. I'm only one step away from becoming a ninth-ranked grandmaster. I'm sure I'll win this time!"

"Haha." James smiled faintly.

Sky had reached the Ninth Stair of the Skyward Stair's peak, but so had James.

James had already reached the rank a year ago.

Moreover, his swordsmanship had improved significantly.

He looked at Sky and said calmly, "Even so, you're not going to win. You should turn back. I'm not handing you the Novenary Golden Pills."

"James, did you mean what you said a year ago?"

James looked at Sky and asked, "Hmm? What do you mean by that?"

Sky replied, "You spread the news a year ago saying whoever could tell you Thea's whereabouts would be rewarded a Novenary Golden Pill."

The moment he heard this, James' heart skipped a beat. He took a step forward and immediately appeared right beside Sky

James stared at Sky and asked, "What did you just say? Do you mean you have news of Thea?"

"Yeah. It's absolutely reliable."

"Where?"

Sky reached out his hand and said, "Hand me the pill first."

"That won't do. You'll give me the information first."

"Haha..." Sky burst into laughter.

"Do you think I still trust you, James? If you don't give me a Novenary Golden Pill, you can search all your want for years or even decades, but you'll never find her."

"Fine. I'll give it to you."

James did not hesitate.

He took out the small bottle containing the Novenary Golden Pills and poured one out for Sky.

"I've already given you the Novenary Golden Pill. Can you tell me where Thea is now?"

Sky held the Novenary Golden Pill up and gently sniffed it.

“What an irresistible fragrance.”

Sky looked like he was intoxicated.

Then, he carefully put the pill away and said, “Thea has returned to Cansington and is back at the Callahans’ villa.”

“Impossible. I went to Cansington a month ago and secretly visited the Callahans’ villa, but Thea had not returned home,” James said bluntly.

“It’s true. News of this has already spread, but other ancient martial artists had no idea where you were. Many of them are gathered in Mount Jade, asking the Omniscient Deity for your whereabouts. I’m sure they’ll come to you soon and tell you the same thing.”

“You had better not be lying, Sky. Even if you refine the Novenary Golden Pill and manage to step into the ninth rank, I can still kill you. You shouldn’t underestimate my current strength.”

James left his threat, picked up the Primordial Dragon Blade, and quickly left Mount Zelus. He rushed to Cansington without stopping.

Meanwhile, Sky held onto the Novenary Golden Pill in admiration.

“It’s been one year. I finally have you.

“After I refine the Novenary Golden Pill, I’ll be a ninth-ranked grandmaster.

“Haha! Finally, my time has come! This generation will bow to me! The world is about to tremble at my feet!”

Chapter 1662

An entire year had passed before James finally obtained news about Thea.

Regardless of whether Sky’s intel was accurate, at least it gave James a sliver of hope.

He rushed to Cansington without stopping to catch his breath.

Meanwhile, the Callahans in Cansington were gathered together in their villa staring at Thea.

The Thea before them looked about only eighteen or nineteen years old. She had long black hair, delicate features, and fair skin.

“Thea, is it really you?”

“You’re finally back, Thea. What happened? A year ago, James came to Cansington looking for you. Then, he never showed up again, and neither did you. Where did you two go in the past year?”

The Callahans surrounded Thea and bombarded her with questions.

“James? Who’s that?” Thea’s innocent face expressed that she had no idea what the people around her were referring to.

She continued. “By the way, my exams are coming up soon. I have to go back to my room and study. Also, when did our family move here?”

Her family members looked at her with dumbstruck eyes.

Thea had just returned to Cansington today.

She headed straight to their original house but discovered it had already been sold to someone else. Lost, she could only borrow a phone from a passerby and call her family.

After returning home, she was thrust into this situation.

All Thea could remember was how she was hanging out with a few of her classmates. Then, she somehow fell asleep. After waking up, everything around her seemed to have changed.

Although she was puzzled, she did not think much of it.

When he finally returned home, she found that her whole family had aged considerably. Even her younger brother was already an adult and had grown so much she could not recognize him anymore.

Gladys asked, “Thea, do you really not remember James?”

Lex said with a frown, “Exam? What are you talking about? Didn’t that happen ten years ago? Have you lost your memory? Are you only able to recall events from ten years ago?”

“Huh? Ten years ago?” Thea frowned.

“Yes... Could that be possible?” asked Gladys. –

That can’t be... I remember it being the weekend yesterday, and I went out to hang out with some classmates. Oh, right. We were in the suburbs. Ah, also, there was a huge fire, and I remember. I...

The more she spoke, the more confused she got.

She could not remember what happened next.

“Oh, I remember now. I seemed to have suddenly dozed off.”

Thea scratched her head and said innocently, “Mom, I’m a little hungry.”

Lex immediately ordered, “Prepare some food immediately.”

“Thank you, Grandpa.” Thea grinned.

The Callahans were confused.

David tugged at Gladys’ sleeve and whispered, “Mom, I think Thea really has lost her memories. She’s forgotten everything that’s happened in the past eleven years and only remembers what happened before then.”

“Yeah, that’s clear to me. What should we do now?” Gladys asked worriedly.

David shrugged and said, “How would I know? Thea came back, but where’s James? Why didn’t James come back with her? Where is he, and what exactly happened in the past year?”

As soon as Thea appeared in Cansington, countless intelligence networks got hold of the information. The news of her return to Cansington spread like wildfire.

Soon, ancient martial artists from around the world gathered at Mount Jade, asking the Omniscient Deity for James’ whereabouts. Everyone had the same intent to exchanging the news for a Novenary Golden Pill.

Meanwhile, James was already rushing to Cansington after hearing the news from Sky.

Half a day later, James walked out of the Cansington Airport. He had shoulder-length hair, dressed in a black outfit, and carried a long sword.

A military vehicle was parked outside the airport.

Several heavily armed soldiers showed up and prevented people from entering or exiting the airport.

The scene left everyone confused.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1663

“What’s going on?”

“Why are there so many soldiers?”

“Who’re they here for?”

As soon as James walked out of the airport, he was slightly taken aback by the countless soldiers waiting to receive him.

He immediately walked over.

At that moment, a slightly tanned man wearing a military robe with five stars on his shoulder rushed over. He appeared in front of James, saluted him, and gave a respectful greeting. “You’re finally back, Dragon King!”

The person that approached was Henry.

James looked at Henry in a daze.

A year ago, he left to search for Thea without saying goodbye.

Seeing Henry again, James felt like he was dreaming. After standing dazed for a few seconds, he responded, “Henry, it’s you! I was wondering for a second who you actually were. Woah, not bad. You’re wearing the Red Flame robe and have five stars. That must mean you’re the Emperor now, right?”

“Yeah.” Henry chuckled.

“Dragon King.” Another voice called out to him.

Another person in a military robe walked over.

This person’s robe had the word ‘Blithe’ embroidered on it and he also had five stars on his shoulder.

It was the Blithe King.

James turned to the Blithe King and nodded.

Then, he looked at Henry and asked, “By the way, has it been peaceful in Sol for the past year?”

Lucjan was dead.

Callan had remodeled the Gu Sect. Under his leadership, the Gu Sect would no longer stand against the country or incite trouble.

As for the Orient Commerce, Mr. Lance was dead.

Moreover, James had an agreement with Sky which meant he would not stir up any trouble.

As for the business side, Maxine assisted Quincy in setting up the New Era Commerce, and Xavion joined them. Things were uneventful on that front.

The reason James left was because Sol no longer needed him.

Hearing this, Henry said, "Mhm. It's been pretty calm. After you disappeared, Callan took control of the Gu Sect again and quickly led them out of the Capital. Orient Commerce also dissolved under pressure from the New Era Commerce.

"The election also proceeded as scheduled.

"This election has been the most unbiased one in a long time. There was no interference from any influential figures. Ultimately, the citizens were able to elect their own King. The new King's name is Josiah Zahm. He used to be the Capital's city governor.

"After the previous King cleaned up the mess, he also got rid of a few popular candidates running in the election. From the final ballot results, Josiah had the highest votes and succeeded as the new King. The old King was also permitted to co-rule alongside Josiah and assist the current King in managing national affairs.

"Sol's borders have also been peaceful.

"This year, Sol unveiled the Z network to the public and it's taken the country by storm. Our nation's economy has been growing rapidly compared to other countries."

Henry briefly described some noteworthy national events to James.

"Originally, you were supposed to be the King, but you disappeared. After you suddenly vanished, the new King came to power and promoted me as the new Emperor. Meanwhile, your previous titles as the Dragon King of the Southern Plains and the commander of the Black Dragon Army have been reserved for you all this while."

"Alright."

James felt relieved after hearing Henry's summary of the past year.

"James, are you here for Thea?" asked Henry.

“Mhm. Thea disappeared a year ago, and I’ve been looking for her all this time. I only learned that she returned to Cansington yesterday, so I rushed back,” James nodded and replied.

Henry said, “I also specifically came here after hearing about it. I checked your whereabouts and saw that you would be getting off the plane around this time, so I came to wait for you.”

“Has Thea really returned to the Callahans’ villa in Cansington?”

“Yeah. The Red Flame’s intelligence network also acquired information regarding this. Thea did indeed appear back in Cansington yesterday morning.”

“Really?”

James was overjoyed.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1664

Chapter 1664

One year had passed.

James had been searching for Thea for an entire year.

This whole time, he failed to find any news about Thea, but just when he was about to give up, he suddenly learned of Thea’s current location.

“James, I’ve seen Thea in the surveillance footage. She’s indeed at the Callahans’ villa,” said Henry.

James was beyond thrilled and could not find the words to express himself. He turned around and quickly left the airport.

Henry chased after him and said, “James, I’ll drop you at the Callahans’ villa.”

“Alright.” James nodded.

Henry escorted James to the Callahans’ villa.

At the Callahans’ villa.

“Grandpa, Dad! We’ve got a problem! Something’s happening outside!”

Tommy frantically ran over to the other Callahans.

At that moment, everyone was gathered around Thea, who was presently eating.

Lex stood up and pointed his cane at Tommy, reprimanding him, "Where are your manners? Why are you causing such a fuss? Can't you see Thea's eating?"

"W-Well..."

Tommy pointed outside and said, "T-There's tons of military vehicles are parked outside our house!"

"What?! Really?"

Lex was overjoyed.

The other family members also stood up.

The appearance of military vehicles meant that James was back.

The whole family rushed out to greet him.

Only Thea was left puzzled by the situation. She scratched her head and murmured, "What's going on? Why'd everyone suddenly leave?"

She was starving right then, so she ignored them and continued eating.

James got out of one of the military vehicles parked outside the gate.

After he got out of the car, he immediately noticed the Callahans waiting at the gate for him. He hurried over and asked, "Is Thea back? Has Thea returned home?"

None of the Callahans knew what had happened.

David nodded and replied, "Yeah. Thea's back, but..."

Before he could finish speaking, James rushed into the villa.

James entered the house and saw an innocent-looking woman dressed in white seemingly engrossed with her meal.

When he saw Thea, James' heart soared with elation.

He walked over excitedly and lifted her up,

"Huh?"

Thea was shocked at the man who suddenly rushed over and hugged her while she was in the middle of eating. After a few seconds, she screamed and repeatedly hit James' shoulder.

"What're you doing? Put me down!!!"

"You pervert!!!"

Thea beat his body and screeched at him.

James let go of Thea.

He looked at her and cried tears of joy.

"Thea, you're alive! Thank god... Thank god you're still alive! I've been searching everywhere for you during the past year! I've climbed mountains and crossed rivers, but I couldn't find any traces of your whereabouts. You don't understand how much it broke my heart."

"Huh?"

Thea looked at the tearful man in front of her dumbfoundedly.

She thought to herself, "Who is this man?"

"Mom!"

Seeing Gladys enter the house, she immediately called out for her.

Thea ran to Gladys and hid behind her. She poked out her tiny head and stared at James in the living room. Then, she asked warily, "Mom, who's this guy? What's wrong with him? He's scaring me."

"That's your husband, James."

"Pfft"

Thea pouted and said, "No way. How could I marry a man like that? My husband must be an upright man. How could he be such a sloppy person? Look at him. His hair is so long. How long has it been since he last cut it? Also, look at the sword he's carrying. He looks like a criminal!"

Thea spouted scathing remarks about James.

James had given Thea a horrible first impression.

Hearing this, the Callahans' jaws all hit the floor in shock.

Lex's face immediately darkened.

The Callahans' current status was only possible because of James.

Yet, here Thea was unable to recognize the man she married.

With one word from James, the Callahans would lose everything if he lost his patience.

Lex quickly interjected, "Thea, he's really your husband. That's James. Take a closer look."

Thea glanced at James once more.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1665

Chapter 1665

However, the person before her did not exist in her memories.

"You're not my husband. Get lost."

She pointed at James, and her pretty lips twisted into a frown.

James was dumbstruck and stared at her, frozen in shock.

"What happened to her...?"

He composed himself after a few seconds and turned to the other family members.

David walked toward James and said in a hushed tone, 'James, we're just as clueless as you. After Thea returned, she seemed to have lost her memories. She only has memories of events before eleven years ago. A few moments ago, she even mentioned needing to revise for her exams.'

James was stunned.

He stared at Thea.

Memory loss?

He walked over, took Thea's hand, and checked her pulse.

"Ahh! What're you going? Let go of me, you pervert!"

Thea kept resisting, but James held firmly onto her hand.

It did not take long for him to understand Thea's condition.

Thea's body had recovered, and her blood had returned to normal. However, her neurons were damaged in the process, which caused her to lose her memories.

The brain is the most complex organ in the human body.

James could easily treat Thea if she sustained an injury literally anywhere else.

Unfortunately, there was nothing he could do for her for the time being since her cranial nerves had been damaged.

Slap!

While James was grimacing pensively, he suddenly felt a sharp pain from his cheek.

Thea had slapped him hard in the face.

James came to his senses and turned to Thea.

"You creep! What're you doing? Get lost! Get out of our house!" Thea exploded hysterically.

"..."

James wanted to say something but was at a loss for words.

David whispered, "James, Thea doesn't remember you right now. Perhaps you should leave for now. Otherwise, she's just going to get more and more furious."

He pulled James out of the living room.

David reassured James outside the house, "James, don't worry. Despite everything, you're still my brother-in-law. Thea doesn't recognize you right now, but I'm sure it's only temporary. I'm sure she'll remember who you are very soon. Even if she can't, no one would blame you for going after another woman."

James could hardly wrap his brain around everything.

He was unsure of what had happened in the past year and who was the person who cured Thea.

At the same time, he had no idea why Thea had lost her memories.

He looked at David helplessly and said, "I guess I have no other option than to wait."

After speaking, he departed and walked back to Henry.

Henry asked, "How did it go, James? Did you see Thea?"

"I did. I saw her, but..."

"What's wrong? Quick, out with it. The suspense is killing me."

James explained, "Thea's lost her memory and doesn't remember me."

"What?" Henry was shocked.

"Don't give me that look. Hurry and get me a place to stay for the time being."

"Let's go to Common Clinic. I've kept it open for you since your last visit to Cansington a year ago. We'll head there immediately."

"Alright."

James was not picky, and where he stayed did not matter to him.

Soon, they arrived at Common Clinic.

James smoked a cigarette and asked worriedly. "Henry, what should I do now?"

"H-How would I know?" Henry replied equally at a loss for what to do.

Click! Clack! Click! Clack!

The neat clicking from a pair of heels suddenly interrupted their conversation.

James raised his head.

An attractive, tall woman with an elegant charisma walked into the clinic.

The woman wore a blue dress and had long black hair.

She had a breathtaking voluptuous figure.

“Maxine?”

James stood up and asked, “What’re you doing here?”
