

Chapter 5 She became a totally loser

Nora covered her eyes and toddled like the autumn fallen leaves.

She can totally feel that Steward hated her very much.

Nora knew that she should leave. At least she had some dignity left.

But she did not move. The door opened and Gabriel was surprised to see her and called her name. He was wondering why she had become so pale and weak.

Steward in the study didn't expect her to be here. He was a little rattled but he still refused to explain to her.

Without replying to Gabriel, she walked right into the study and asked Steward in a quivering voice, "Why did you do this to me? Is this what you really want to do, to hurt me even if you lost your eyesight?"

"What you heard is true," He pressed his lips together and then sneered, "Do I need to repeat my words to you?"

Nora clenched her fist and the veins stood out. She decided to tell him the secret two years ago.

"Two years ago, I once went to Sebroiria to find Ann back. At that time, she was still unwilling to come back even if I told her that you had lost your eyesight. Soon she got married. This is what she did to you two years ago. After hearing this, will you still forgive her?"

After saying that, she stared at Steward's face and wanted to know how he was going to react.

She knew that his reaction to this mattered to her.

But in the end, he let her down.

Steward was stunned for a while and then made a sardonic smile.

"I don't mind what Ann did. But whatever you do makes me sick."

He definitely knew what words would hurt her. The more pain she felt, the more content he would be.

Nora made a bitter smile and the final flash of hope in her eyes disappeared.

She became a total loser.

She was going to wipe away the tears but only to find that her eyes were too dry to shed tears.

She really wanted to say to him, "Even if you hate me, I still want to give you all I have. Steward, I love you, more than anyone in the world."

But how would that make a difference?

He kept hurting her with his words and forgot she was also a person with feelings.

Outside the door, Gabriel stood and interrupted their conversation, "Nora, please leave him for your own good."

Nora made a smile, but in Gabriel's eye, the smile was more like a crying face.

"I have only five days left." After saying that, she immediately left.

Gabriel stared behind Nora and felt a little worried about her.

And then he turned around to look at Steward, sighing, "I hope you will never regret what you did to her."

"Of course I won't," said Steward coldly.

Gabriel felt sorry for Nora.

Steward and Nora had their marriage registration without holding the wedding.

He still remembered that Nora held the marriage license like holding a treasure and she kissed it again and again.

There is a limit to human endurance. "If Nora couldn't stand him anymore, did Steward know what he would lose?" Gabriel thought.

After running back to her room, she weakly sat on the ground and took a deep breath. She almost couldn't breathe and clenched her chest. She was begging before Steward, "Steward, could you treat me as your wife and give me some caring before I leave this world?"

She could imagine how he was gonna react. He might say, "I don't want to have anything more to do with you!"

All his tenderness was only for Ann and Nora couldn't get any of it.

Her heart was soaked in the bitter water, bitter to the extreme.

After a few days, she will get her liberation. Her life will no longer taste bitter.

The next morning, as usual, Nora got up early and then made breakfast.

When she knocked on Steward's room with breakfast, she did not expect that she was greeted by him with a heavy slap!