Married at First Sight Chapter 2394-Didn't Julian also say that he was strongly urged by his parents to get married?

Kiera thought of Julian's age and felt that it was normal for Julian to be urged to marry, but she was so young that her mother was worried that she would not be able to marry.

It's just that she didn't want to marry. If she wanted to marry, she would definitely find a man who was not afraid that she would be able to fight.

"I have to worry about it. Let me worry about my two elder brothers first. The eldest brother is 32 years old, and the second brother is 28 years old. They get married first, and you will marry later." When mentioning the two sons, Mrs. Caron said again that there were bouts of heartache.

She muttered: "I don't know what you young people think. In our old age, we would consider marriage when we were adults. It is normal for men and women to marry. In your generation, it is normal for men to marry. Women don't want to be married. Even if they're married, they don't want to have more children. They can only have one child at most. It's so lonely. In our country, we pay attention to many children and blessings, so we should have two. My child, that way you won't be too lonely.

When your parents are old and need you to take care of the elderly, if you have brothers and sisters, you can discuss it, so you don't have to bear all the pressure by yourself."

Listening to her mother's nagging, Kiera smiled and said, "Are you discussing extubation? Mom, you don't even look at how stressful life is for young people today. It's also high, and the cost of raising a child is ridiculously high, but it's not like you used to; you just needed to raise a baby without starving, but now it's very embarrassing, and it's been embarrassing since kindergarten.

In addition to caring for the elderly, raising children, and repaying various loans, it is simple to feel overwhelmed by pressure. Who would dare to give birth? Our family's conditions are very good, but not everyone has the same conditions as ours."

Her family had opened martial arts gyms for dozens of generations and had accumulated some wealth from generation to generation. In her generation, the family conditions would be much better than others.

Mrs. Caron stopped talking immediately.

Some of her old classmates had very difficult living conditions. People in their 50s and 60s had to work part-time to earn money when they became grandparents. If they didn't go to work, their children couldn't afford their living expenses.

After Kiera made the tea, she brought a tray and took out the teapot and several teacups.

Mr. Caron and Julian seemed to have a good chat, and when Kiera went out, both of them were laughing.

Kiera walked over and poured a cup of tea for her father and Julian.

Mr. Caron: "Julian, please drink tea."

Julian thanked.

Julian showed nobility with his gestures, and his good upbringing made Mr. Caron have a very good impression of him.

Knowing that Julian was the boss of a big company, Mr. Caron repeatedly praised him for being young and promising.

Kiera went to wash the fruit again, took some snacks, and put them on the coffee table together.

She picked up the things Julian bought and put them on another table so that there would be no space on the coffee table.

When Julian returned, these things would be brought back to him.

Even if the Caron family accepted his gift, they would only accept half of it and return half of it.
