

Chapter 25 I had already got my retribution

When he walked out of the door, it started to snow. The winter had arrived and the end of this year was around the corner.

He got a call from the hospital and the doctor said Ann had a medical condition.

He immediately went to the school not because he still cared about Ann but he wanted Nora's kidney could still work.

Even if the kidney was not in Nora's body but it was still a part of Nora.

"What happened?" asked Steward.

Since he told Ann that he did not love her any more, he had kept an eye on her and did not allow her to leave Alexandria.

And he seriously told Ann what she could do and what she couldn't in order to make sure Nora's kidney in her body was healthy. She was not allowed to drink or stay up late. If Ann went to the bar at night, she would be taken out by the guards. She was also not allowed to see the movie premier in the early hours of morning.

It's all because Steward so cared about Nora's kidney in Ann's body.

But why did the health problem still arise?

The doctor said, "Ms Edith's kidney is experiencing a rejection, and taking drugs has been useless. The transplanted kidney doesn't work and now she has to rely on dialysis..."

Steward burst into a rage and almost lost his mind.

What the doctor said meant Nora's kidney was wasted!

He took a step backward and could not believe what he had heard.

He was wondering, "If the kidney hadn't been taken away from her body, could Nora still be alive now?"

But no one could give him an answer.

Steward walked into the ward and looked at Ann who was at the moment crying. There was hatred and complaint in his eyes.

"The kidney did not belong to you. Even if you have got it by cheating, you will lose it anyway," said Steward.

Ann froze and still did not think she was wrong. She didn't want to die.

"I am sorry! It's all my fault! I won't cheat you guys again!" she shook her head in tears and begged, "Steward, please help me! I have no one to rely on! I'm still young and I don't want to die!"

Now Ann was shrouded in the shadow of death, and she was afraid that one day dialysis couldn't work.

Steward gritted his teeth, "How can I help you? You have already got a kidney from Nora."

Ann sighed and sniffed, "Help me find another kidney..."

It's not easy to find a suitable kidney. But Ann thought, with the power of the Mandel's, she could find a suitable one and do the surgery in advance.

Or the illegal trading of kidney was another way.

Steward wore his cold face and the room was in silence.

Apparently, Ann didn't feel guilty for what she had done to Nora. The reason she apologized before him was that she wanted him to help find a suitable kidney.

He wanted to accuse Ann of being shameless, but he remembered that he had also been so mean to Nora.

For a thousand times, Steward wanted to go back to the past and give himself a heavy slap to stop hurting Nora.

He could not believe that he had said to Nora, "Human can still be alive with only one kidney."

"That's exactly what you deserve!" He scoffed and left Ann. At the same time he asked the guards outside the door to leave.

Ann started to scream. She knew that Steward had given upon on her.

She said, "It's not fair. Not fair for me! You also hurt Nora and you are an accomplice! Why didn't you get your retribution?"

Steward paused for a while and he started to clench his fists.

He murmured, "I had already got my retribution."

It was still snowing. People on the street walked in down jackets, and their faces were frozen to red.

Steward stood by the window and he could smell the lingering disinfectant. He started to recall the doctor's words in his mind, "Although the cornea does not need to be matched, some people might still have a rejection after the surgery. But you have recovered very well and there's no need for reexamination"

But the doctor didn't know that he drank, stayed up late, and used his eyes excessively. All those things did harm to his eyes but he still got a pair of healthy eyes.

Oh, he was more likely to shed tears than before.

Sometimes he just couldn't control himself and burst into tears that had been accumulated for a long time.

Steward smiled and said in a soft voice to Nora, "A crybaby."