

Chapter 36 You always look brilliant.

Steward scolded, "What do you mean?"

Until now Gabriel realized that the wigs were not good gifts. Even Nora wore it, she could not see it.

"I thought Nora might like it." Gabriel explained.

Mia smiled and said, "Nora, I remember you said you wanted your hair to be long. If you wear this, you can make your hair long right away."

"Really?" asked Nora. She touched her hair and it was still very short.

Mia led her upstairs and went straight to her room. She picked a most suitable wig for Nora and then helped her to wear it. She also put makeup on Nora.

When she finished that, she felt the old Nora was here again. She took out her phone and took several pictures of her in order to send them to her mother. This time, the photos needn't be photoshopped.

Mia wiped her tears and then led Nora downstairs.

The moment Steward saw Nora, he was totally shocked and speechless. He had imagined this scene a hundred times. He hoped she hadn't experienced all those stuff but stayed healthy.

During the two years of their marriage, though he could not see her, he knew she had long hair. Every time she supported him, he couldn't help reaching out to touch her hair.

Not hearing Steward's voice, Nora was a little nervous. She touched the hair on her chest and then asked, "How do I look?"

"You are much prettier than I last saw you," Gabriel's eyes misted a little and he blinked.

Steward stretched out his long arms and took her into his arms. With one hand around her waist, Steward pressed her head to his chest, sighing, "You look brilliant. You always look brilliant."

Nora murmured, "But the long hair is fake."

"You will grow your own hair soon, honey. You soon will have long hair," said Steward.

"Yes, my hair will grow long."

"Nora's mother is already suspicious, so let's take Nora home as soon as possible," Mia said with relief. She finally didn't have to lie and Mrs. Hill would be happy to see Nora.

"I agree. I will tell Nora about this and make her prepared," said Steward.

After Mia and Gabriel left, Steward took Nora to the supermarket and explained to her what was a supermarket.

Nora was no longer afraid of being in front of lots of people as long as Steward held her hands.

"Chips, ice cream, cola, soft sweets, juice..." Nora said what she wanted to eat, and then promised, "I will brush my teeth."

Steward thought she was really cute. He remembered when he helped brush her teeth, Nora was swallowing the water bubbles.

“You can buy this stuff but you can’t eat too much,” said Steward.

Nora nodded and what she thought was she was going to hide those snacks and eat without letting him know.

When they arrived home, Steward soon put all the snacks she bought into a box and locked it.

“You have already eaten much fried food so no more snacks for you today,” Steward touched her pursed lips and pretended to frighten her, “Otherwise, all your teeth will be eaten by little worms.”

“Then what else can I eat? I don’t want to eat the “healthy food” anymore!” Nora complained.

“I will cook for you. Will you eat that?” asked Steward.

Steward had never cooked before but he got a talent for cooking. He downloaded an app about cooking and then cooked according to the content on the app. Finally, he had made three dishes and a bowl of soup, both beautiful and delicious.

He himself thought it was okay, not bad.

But it turned out his cooking was more than “okay” and Nora could not stop eating whatever Steward put in her bowl.

She learned basic living skills really fast and she could feed herself just fine.

Unfortunately, the test results showed that she could not be able to see the world forever.

If Nora could not gain her memories, she would live in the darkness, never able to imagine the image of anything in the world.

Every time Steward thought of this, he felt sorry for her because he wanted to give her the best things in the world but she could not see them.