

Chapter 33 Let me be your eyes

Steward was the first one to regain his senses. He thought, "Does that mean taking care of Nora was like taking care of a baby?" For him, he had a lot of time and energy and could be patient with her all the time.

"I got that. Is there anything I need to pay attention to when looking after her? I will write them down. Maybe it will take a while for her to get her body examined," said Steward.

Mia was relieved. Just as Gabriel said, everything was going to get better. It was still good news even if she had lost her mental ability.

But...

Mia thought she was too late to come here or she would be the first person Nora saw when she opened her eyes.

At this moment, Nora was very fragile so she would be dependent on the one who she saw first when she woke up.

Nora thought, "What if she saw me first? Maybe she won't be with Steward right now."

"Is that God's providence?" murmured Mia.

At this time, Gabriel pointed out, "Will Nora gain her memories?"

The doctor shook his head, "It's hard to say since the brain was such a delicate thing. She might remember you guys someday, maybe never.”

Mia bit her lip, conflicted inside. She hoped Nora would never think of those painful memories but at the same time, she did not want her to be hurt by Steward again.

Steward now cared more about whether there was any possibility for Nora to have an eye operation. He wanted to find her a cornea match.

“I am sorry to tell you that it’s useless for Nora to have a cornea transplant operation. During the examination, we found that she was permanently visually impaired...” said the doctor.

“But she had removed the tumour in her head.” Mia was surprised and asked, “Do you mean Nora would never see the world again?”

“I am afraid so.” said the doctor.

Steward felt his heart was broken.

He caressed Nora’s eyelids, and thought, “This pair of beautiful eyes would never see the sunshine. But don’t be afraid, Nora. Let me be your eyes for the rest of your life.”

After the doctor left, Mia asked Gabriel to buy some porridge.

Gabriel bought the sweet pumpkin porridge. When Nora smelt that, she couldn’t help swallowing. But she did not know what to do or say but only put her hands on her belly, frowning.

Mia tried to feed Nora like a mom did to her child, and then lifted the spoon to her mouth.

“Nora, open your mouth. Ah~”

But Nora could not see anything and didn't understand what Mia was saying. She didn't know what to do when the food came.