

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE/

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4196-Spare Your Lives Kai didn't utter a word. Instead, he cast a chilling gaze at Freya, his eyes brimming with murderous intent.

Feeling the murderous intent in Kai's eyes, Freya finally shut her mouth, no longer daring to meet Kai's gaze.

Even speaking on a moral high horse was no longer effective.

"You two better come clean. If I have to present evidence, there's no doubt you and your sister will meet your end," Kai said coldly.

Upon hearing that, Felipe immediately fell to his knees before Kai with a thud.

Freya glanced at Felipe, and finally, feeling helpless, she, too, knelt on the ground.

"Mr. Chance, we were wrong, truly wrong. We committed such actions because we were blinded by greed. Please, we beg for your mercy, Mr. Chance. We won't dare to repeat this mistake. Thaddeus promised that once he captured you, he would share a portion of Demon Seal Alliance's hundred-year offering with us. Freya and I don't have a family, nor do we have anyone to rely on. Even though we joined Central Alchemist Guild, we were still at the very bottom of the hierarchy. We weren't even qualified to follow President Chance during this Alchemist Fair. Moreover, Thaddeus threatened us, saying that if we didn't comply, he would kill both of us here on Cauldron Peak. No one would notice if one or two people went missing. We were left with no choice but to comply. Please spare us, Mr. Chance!" Felipe continuously bowed his head, tears streaming down his face non-stop.

When Freya took in Felipe's demeanor, her eyes reddened, and she also started crying.

"You two are way out of line. Are you really going to betray Mr. Chance for your own gain? Mr. Chance was even kind enough to take you two under his wing. You two are simply barbaric!" Sigurd chided Felipe and Freya.

Since they shared the same surname, Sigurd initially had a decent impression of Felipe and Freya. However, he never expected them to be this kind of people.

"Kai, we should kill the two of them. Keeping people like them around will only spell trouble sooner or later," Viola chimed in angrily.

Upon hearing that, Felipe was terrified, his whole body trembling as he continuously bowed in fear.

At that moment, Freya was finally fearful. Her face turned extremely pale, and she no longer held the air of moral superiority she once had.

“Considering you two were also forced to do this out of desperation, I’ll let you off the hook this time.” Kai gazed at the siblings kneeling before him.

In the end, he chose to spare them.

“Thank you, Mr. Chance. Thank you, Mr. Chance!” Felipe bowed with utmost sincerity.

Subsequently, he took Freya by the hand and turned to walk down the mountain.

“Where are you two headed?” Kai asked.

“Cauldron Peak is far too treacherous. It’s not a place for us siblings to linger. We should descend and leave this place. Besides, now that we’re not he won’t let us off the hook exposing your location to The et should escape as soon as possible,” Felipe said.

Kai continued to ask, “Do you think you two can escape this toxic mist?”

Felipe fell silent. If they didn’t have the detoxification pill, and without Kai’s pill to absorb the toxins, they probably wouldn’t have been able to escape this toxic mist by relying on themselves.

“You two might as well stick with me. You can still keep reporting our location to Thaddeus,” Kai suggested.

“I wouldn’t dare to do that anymore.” Felipe hastily waved his hand.

He considered it a blessing that Kai was willing to spare them. There’s no way we’ll dare tip off Thaddeus again.

“If I ask you to do so, just do as I say.

This is also a way to throw UT Thaddeus off guard and prevent him from suspecting you. Thaddeus has teamed up with many people, planning to leverage the power of Sky Stasher Sect and completely restructure the entire alchemist field in Ethereal Realm. I suspect many alchemists will die this time, so I must expose Thaddeus’ conspiracy.”

The reason Kai allowed Felipe and Freya to keep sending messages was to lull Thaddeus into a false sense of security.

Once everything was set up, he would have Felipe and Freya inform Thaddeus. This way, he could catch Thaddeus in one fell swoop.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4197-If He Dares Hog It Kai reckoned that as long as he managed to get Thaddeus to lay bare his conspiracy, the multitude of alchemists would not let him off easily.

“What? So, Thaddeus is targeting all the alchemists in the Ethereal Realm and not just you?”

Viola was very much taken aback, never having expected Thaddeus to harbor such a massive conspiracy.

“In that case, we must hurry up and leave, Mr. Chance. We need to alert the others as soon as possible. If Thaddeus were to succeed, it would spell doom for the entire alchemy world!” Sigurd urged anxiously. “Alright. Let’s get going!”

After Kai had said that, he casually waved his hand. Immediately, a sea of internal flame sparked to life.

In no time, the dead bodies on the ground and the alchemist of the Dupont family who was still hanging on to life by a thread were all reduced to ashes by the raging fire.

At the sight of the roaring flames before him, a cold sweat broke out on Felipe’s forehead.

Fortunately, Kai spared us! Otherwise, Freya and I would have likely become part of those in this inferno, also having been reduced to ashes. His strength is simply beyond our ability to challenge! How naive were we to collaborate with Thaddeus in hopes of sharing in the hundred-year offering from Demon Seal Alliance! Even if we had killed Kai for real, we probably wouldn’t have been able to obtain the hundred-year offering from Demon Seal Alliance. Without absolute strength, the best way to stay safe is to keep a low profile!

Kai and the others traveled at a swift pace.

Thanks to the pill, they didn’t have to worry about being poisoned as the mist receded rapidly before their eyes.

After an indeterminate amount of time, they finally got out of the area.

At that moment, Thaddeus and the others who were still in the mist were anxiously waiting for Vincent.

“President Surrey, let’s leave this place first before looking for Mr. Dupont! While the mist here may not be highly toxic, staying for a prolonged period could still harm the body. Our detoxification pill is incapable of neutralizing this toxin,” Ernesto said to Thaddeus.

Thaddeus' brow furrowed, his face as black as thunder.

"D*mn it! What on earth is Vincent trying to do, having taken all his family members away? Did he mention what he was planning to do when he left?"

"No, but he seemed to have left in quite a hurry. From what I heard, he probably left with his men right after receiving a report from Felipe and Freya. Could he have taken his family members to capture Kai?"

Ernesto wondered.

When Thaddeus heard that, his eyes narrowed slightly, and his expression turned terrifyingly icy.

"D*mn that Vincent! I know exactly what he has gone to do. Without a doubt, he must have gone off to capture Kai. He wants to monopolize Kai's cauldron, his mind sumed by it all this time.

If he dares hog it for himself, I'm going to kill him when I catch him!

He gritted his teeth, beyond livid.

Now that such a situation had cropped up within his team when the plan had yet to have been set into motion, he was inexorably infuriated.

"President Surrey, why don't you reach out to Felipe and Freya and ask them about the situation?" Ernesto suggested.

"No. If we were to contact them carelessly, and Kai were to notice it, things would be tricky. They will initiate contact with us again after some time. Then, we'll know what the situation is like. Let's leave now and not wait anymore!"

Thaddeus had no intention of waiting for Vincent any longer.

With so many people there, it would be troublesome if they were to continue waiting in the toxic mist and end up being poisoned too deeply.

Ernesto gave a nod, then called out to the rest of the people and resumed their journey forward.

None of them knew that Vincent and his family members had already been annihilated by Kai by then, wiped out without a trace.

After making their way through the mist, Thaddeus and the others all stopped and rested while panting heavily.

Even with detoxification pills, they didn't work to neutralize the toxin in their bodies, so they could only stop right then and rely on spiritual energy to slowly force the toxin out.

By doing so, they were bound to fall behind many others. Nonetheless, there was simply no other way.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4198-No Choice But To Believe Right then, Kai, Viola, and the others were half way up Cauldron Peak.

With Kai in the lead, they continued climbing toward the mountaintop.

On the way, they occasionally encountered some alchemists. Most of them recognized Kai and greeted him.

However, Kai didn't mention anything about Thaddeus' conspiracy.

After all, he had no idea if the alchemists were in league with Thaddeus. Moreover, even if they weren't, there was no guarantee that they would believe him had he told them about it.

At present, he was in a hurry to find Wyatt and Dylan. The only way then was to convince the two men about it before gradually spreading the news.

"I've been looking for you all this time, Mr. Chance. Why are you so slow?" Wyatt called out to Kai as he was heading toward the mountaintop with the others.

"I got held up by some matters, so I was a little late in getting to the mountain, President Chance!"

Upon seeing Wyatt, Kai promptly breathed a sigh of relief.

Having run into him now, I can inform him about Thaddeus' conspiracy!

"No wonder I didn't see you all the way here," Wyatt said.

After saying that, he noticed Felipe and Freya and remarked in curiosity, "I didn't know you two were traveling with Mr. Chance. I even had people looking for you. Cauldron Peak isn't safe. Given your meager capabilities, don't go wandering around!"

"Understood, President Chance!" Felipe and Freya's faces were flushed with embarrassment and shame.

Just moments ago, they claimed to be considered nobodies in Central Alchemist Guild, utterly disregarded as thin air. But right then, not only did Wyatt remember them, but he even specially sent people to look for them, making it clear that he cared for them.

“President Chance, I have something to tell you. Please come with me!”

Kai called Wyatt aside to a secluded spot since the man was accompanied by quite a few alchemists, and he was uncertain if any of them were in cahoots with Thaddeus.

Take Felipe and Freya, for instance. Despite being alchemists of Central Alchemist Guild, they still colluded with Thaddeus.

“What is it that warrants all this mysteriousness, Mr. Chance?” Wyatt asked in perplexity.

“President Chance, do you have any idea about the intentions of the president of Epean Alchemist Guild, Thaddeus Surrey?” Kai queried.

“Intentions? What intentions?” Wyatt was taken aback.

“I’ll be frank with you. Thaddeus has conspired with Sky Slasher Sect to make a move against Medicine God Island. He has rallied quite a number of alchemists, intending to restructure the alchemy world of the Ethereal Realm! If we don’t stop him this time, many alchemists would likely lose their lives on Medicine God Island,” Kai divulged.

Wyatt’s eyes widened to saucers, his face a picture of disbelief.

Vol.net “What? You’re saying that Thaddeus is planning to take on all alchemists in the entire alchemy world? He couldn’t possibly have the guts, could he? Also, how did you find out about his collusion with Sky Slasher Seet?”

Kai knew that no one would believe him easily, so he meticulously recounted the entire sequence of events to the man.

Even so, Wyatt found it hard to believe that Thaddeus had the nerve to do so.

Left with no other choice, Kai could only call Felipe and Freya over.

It was only after hearing from Felipe and Freya that Wyatt was convinced.

However, the matter gave him quite a headache as there was no guarantee that anyone would believe him even if he were to tell them about it.

At the end of the day, everyone was essentially competitors on Cauldron Peak. Perhaps everyone would think that he was just crying wolf and deliberately trying to scare them off the mountain.

“All I can do right now is to caution the alchemists of Central Alchemist Guild to be careful. But others might not necessarily believe me,” Wyatt said.

"I understand. Let's go and look for the Zorn and Zeever families now. If we can convince them of the matter, we'll have leverage against Thaddeus and the others. At that time even if the other alchemists don't believe it, Thaddeus won't be able to succeed," Kai declared.

"Alright. There's no time to lose, so let's set off right away!" Wyatt nodded in agreement.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4199-This Is Not Lightning Tribulation Kai nodded, then headed toward the mountaintop with Wyatt and the others.

He was certain that once they reached the mountaintop, the majority of the alchemists would surely be there.

But shortly after they had set off, a series of loud sounds unexpectedly split the air.

Rumble!

Crack!

Bolts of lightning suddenly shot from the mountaintop, striking the ground a near distance from Kai and the others.

At that moment, several deep crates were instantly carved into the mountainside from the lightning. Fragments of rock flew toward the crowd. Upon witnessing that scene, many alchemists were rooted to the spot in shock.

With a casual wave of his hand, Kai conjured a shield and blocked off the fragments of rock. Otherwise, many would have been undoubtedly injured. "What's going on here? No one has broken through, so where did this lightning tribulation come from?" Wyatt wondered, greatly perplexed. "This isn't lightning tribulation."

Kai lifted his gaze to the sky. There were no lightning tribulation clouds overhead, so he was sure that the lightning was not lightning tribulation. "Isn't lightning tribulation? What is it, then?" Wyatt asked.

"It's probably a test, one from Medicine God?" Kai reckoned.

"A test? What do you mean? Why is there such a thing as Medicine God's test?"

Wyatt was very much puzzled. All the way here, there hasn't been any test from Medicine God!

"President Chance, surely, you didn't travel all this way without encountering any danger?" Kai asked, curious.

“Not really. We did encounter some demon beasts, but we managed to slay them all. There weren’t any other dangers!” Wyatt shook his head.

“It seems that people ascending the mountain from different directions encounter different tests.”

Kai then recounted his experience to the man, especially the fact that he encountered a light curtain and toxic mist.

All those were considered tests.

After Wyatt had listened to it all, his expression turned solemn. He had never heard of any test associated with ascending Cauldron Peak, but from the look of things right then, reaching the mountaintop and obtaining Medicine God’s legacy wasn’t as easy as he had thought.

“Quick, look, Mr. Chance!” Sigurd exclaimed, pointing at the sky.

Streams of blue light materialized from the top of Cauldron Peak and gathered in the sky. Following that countless flashes of lightning weaved and brewed within the blue light, accompanied by the crackling sounds of thunder. . to It was as if the bolts of lightning would strike down any moment. Given the sheer amount, there was likely nowhere for everyone to take cover even if they wanted to do so.

“We’re in trouble now. Do we truly have nowhere to hide? I wonder how the lightning power is and whether we can withstand it with our cultivation,” Wyatt mused, his brows furrowed.

Boom!

No sooner had the words left his lips than a flash of lightning shot down and struck an alchemist directly.

The alchemist spurted blood on the spot and collapsed to the ground, severely injured.

Although he didn’t die, he was gravely injured. Without a doubt, another hit would spell the end of his life. Upon witnessing that scene, everyone was shaken to the core.

Wyatt directed everyone to start treating the alchemist who had been struck and sustained severe injuries.

But at that moment, the lightning grew increasingly denser, threatening to strike down anytime.

At that, everyone was at a loss. Wearing grim expressions, they all looked at Wyatt.

As the president, the man was their only hope for a solution.

However, Wyatt was also at a complete loss right then, his face a picture of anxiety.

In the face of the sudden test of lightning, he seemed helpless, while the alchemists had panic and fear written on their faces, uncertain of what to do.

Conversely, the look in Kai's eyes was extraordinarily resolute. He was acutely aware that in such a time of crisis, someone had to step out and guide everyone through it.

"Stay calm, everyone!" His voice pierced through the thunder, sounding exceptionally composed "We must stand united and face this test together. I believe that as long as we work together, we will surely find a way to break it."

As he spoke, he began to survey his surroundings, attempting to discern a pattern to avoid the lightning or locate a safe area.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4200-Just Escape Unfortunately, the entire area was under the cover of lightning, leaving no place to hide at all.

Boom!

Another bolt of lightning shot down, hitting an alchemist and promptly striking him to the ground.

At that, everyone was thrown into a panic, scrambling to escape in a frenzy.

"Stay calm, everyone! Simply running around at this time would only be courting death," Kai hastily cried out to stop them.

"Listen to Mr. Chance! Don't panic! Also, stop right where you are!"

Wyatt also stopped everyone from running away chaotically.

Running around aimlessly at this point is the dumbest decision!

Rumble!

Lightning continued to strike relentlessly, but not every single one hit someone.

Whenever it struck the ground, it would carve out a massive crater.

After several strikes of lightning, Kai's eyes abruptly lit up.

He noticed that the lightning seemingly didn't strike indiscriminately, but blast certain areas selectively.

In turn, he realized that perhaps there was a way to predict or avoid the lightning strikes.

“Be on the lookout, everyone. The lightning seems to be following a certain trajectory. We need to figure out the pattern and use it to dodge the lightning,” Kai analyzed swiftly.

Upon hearing that, Wyatt immediately rallied the alchemists to assist Kai in observing and analyzing the lightning’s order.

Following a tense discussion, they discovered that the lightning always prioritized attacking those with lower cultivation or weaker constitutions.

Perhaps that was Medicine God’s deliberate arrangement to weed out those of lower capabilities.

That was also why Sylvain didn’t allow those with low cultivation to enter Cauldron Peak.

If they were to venture into Cauldron Peak, they would likely meet their ends before they could lay eyes on Medicine God’s legacy.

“All alchemists below Fifth Level Tribulator gather together, while those with higher cultivation surround them. We need to form a shield to protect these alchemists.”

Kai suggested that the alchemists with higher cultivations form a circle to protect those with lower cultivations within.

“Is everyone ready? We need to start moving!” he shouted loudly.

Under his lead, the alchemists swiftly sprang into action, arranging themselves according to the plan.

With a thunderous crack, another bolt of lightning shot down. But this time, it was intercepted by the combined efforts of alchemists with high cultivations and didn’t inflict any harm.

At the sight of that, everyone’s confidence soared. Obeying Kai’s instructions, they steadily made their way toward the mountaintop.

Despite the continuous strikes of lightning along the way, the alchemists repeatedly resolve the crisis with wisdom and courage under Kai’s guidance.

However, after they had traveled for some distance, the lightning in the sky suddenly grew denser and intensified. It was as if it wanted to devour the whole of Cauldron Peak. “Be careful, everyone! This is the crucial moment!” Kai warned loudly.

The lightning was like the toxic mist, intensifying the deeper they ventured. It was the pivotal moment then. If they could just get past that point, they would pass the test of lightning.

Amidst the thunderous strikes of several thick bolts of lightning, the powerful alchemists on the outer circle unleashed their spiritual energy with all their might, forming a shield to protect the alchemists at the center who were less powerful.

But following the few bolts of lightning, the shield shattered with a loud crash. Several alchemists were sent flying to all crash to the ground, severely injured.

Upon witnessing that scene, Wyatt paled with shock.

As the lightning in the sky took shape once again, ready to strike down at any moment, everyone wore expressions of terror on their faces.

“President Chance, you should all go. Don’t bother about us anymore,” an alchemist with lower cultivation said.

“Yes, President Chance. If you can escape, go ahead and do it.

Otherwise, we’re all going to die here! Sure enough, Cauldron Peak’s magical items aren’t easy to obtain. I’ve accepted my fate!”

Many alchemists waited for death to take them.

They knew that it was utterly impossible to pass through the lightning with their capabilities.
