

Chapter 1391 Thoroughly Irritated

Although Jeremy's statement after the Turner Group's bankruptcy was clearly provocative, it also served as an indirect confirmation that Brandon's plan had worked. Jeremy was thoroughly irritated after the Turner Group collapsed.

This was good news for Brandon.

Faced with anger and loss of composure, even a rational person like Jeremy was bound to reveal more flaws and become disorganized.

When that happened, Brandon could seize the opportunity and launch a direct strike at the opponent's stronghold, capturing the mysterious pharmacist who had been lurking behind the scenes for so long.

However, with the opponent's loss of composure came the increased risk of Janet getting hurt.

Although Brandon was eager to catch the opponent as soon as possible, he prioritized Janet's safety above all else. As a result, he refrained from taking further action for the next few days. Instead, he personally picked up and dropped off Janet at work every day and spent a lot more time at her studio.

Following the bankruptcy of the Turner Group, Jeremy and Suzanne inexplicably traveled abroad. Although they were thousands of miles away, Brandon remained vigilant and didn't underestimate the situation, because Janet's safety was not to be taken lightly.

He constantly feared that the opponent might have left behind some last resort or threat. If she ever got hurt due to his carelessness, he would never forgive himself for the rest of his life.

Despite Janet's dedication to preparing for the fashion show, she couldn't help but feel like there was something off with Brandon.

Although they'd been married for so long, it was the first time she had ever seen him this nervous.

With a relatively slow day at work, Janet managed to close early and come home with Brandon, planning on personally cooking a meal for him.

After a satisfying dinner, the couple cuddled up on the sofa and watched an entertaining variety show, escaping from the pressures of the outside world. Taking advantage of the comfortable and intimate atmosphere, Janet nestled into Brandon's warm embrace and looked up at him worriedly, asking, "What's been going on these past few days? Why do I get that the feeling that you're worried about something?"

Embracing her tightly and inhaling the sweet scent of her hair, Brandon slowly relaxed. With a gentle smile, he reassured her, "It's nothing. Perhaps I've just been feeling a bit tired lately."

Janet sat up straight and looked at Brandon with a dissatisfied look. "Don't try to lie to me. I can tell that there's something wrong with you. What exactly is going on?"

Brandon indulgently pinched Janet's tender soft cheek and playfully challenged her, "Guess."

Janet's frustration grew as she pouted and raised her little fists, ready to pound his chest. "Don't keep me in suspense! Just tell me what's going on!"

"Fine, fine..." Brandon relented and held Janet's small hand. "I've just been worried about Jeremy and Suzanne's issue."

Janet had some knowledge of Jeremy and Suzanne's relationship. She also knew that Brandon might have had a hand in the downfall of the Turner Group.

In spite of that, she couldn't understand why he was so concerned with them, considering that the Turner Group had already fallen, and that Jeremy and Suzanne were only small fry. Why was he acting like he was facing a formidable foe?

Janet mulled over all this and asked him directly.

Brandon vaguely replied, "I'm worried that they might act recklessly and harm you."

In reality, what he truly feared was the mysterious pharmacist who lurked behind Jeremy and Suzanne.

This mystery figure had a very calm and composed demeanor. So far, he hadn't revealed any vulnerabilities, and had the ability to develop a variety of highly dangerous drugs, making him a serious threat.

In order to shield Janet from unnecessary worry and anxiety, however, he chose not to reveal his true thoughts.

With a skeptical look on her face, Janet asked, "Really?"

Brandon pulled her into his arms, bearing a faint smile. "Why would I ever lie to you? Moreover, you've been so busy these days that you've neglected meals and rest. Don't I have to keep an eye on you to ensure that you get enough of both?"

His words made Janet feel warm inside, forcing her lips to slowly curl up into a smile.

"Since you're being so considerate, I won't ask any more questions." As she spoke, she wrapped her arms around his neck and whispered affectionately, "Once I'm done with the fashion week abroad, I'll come right back and spend quality time with you."
