

Chapter 109

"How dare you..."

James was about to go berserk Thea grabbed hold of him immediately.

"Alright, let's go." She was familiar with his temper by now.

He even beat someone up during a family meeting. If she did not stop him, this matter would get blown out of proportion.

Those in the military were so hot-tempered.

James did not lash out as Thea had a hold on him. Both of them walked toward the entrance.

"Thea, is that you?" A woman at the entrance was staring at Thea in surprise.

"Hmm?"

Thea turned, noticing a woman about twenty-seven or -eight years old. She was wearing a long, blue dress and clutching a Chanel bag.

Gold earrings dripped from her ears, a crystal necklace sparkled at her neck, and a gold bangle flashed on her arm.

Decked out in gold and silver, she looked beautiful and elegant. She was on the arm of a man in his thirties.

He wore branded clothing from head to toe, looking powerful and important.

"W-who are you?" Thea could not recognize her.

"Thea, it's you!"

The woman in the jewelry and blue dress approached, smiling.

"Have you forgotten? I'm Xena Ferguson!"

"Oh, it's you, Xena! Thea finally remembered a Xena Ferguson in her class back in university.

"Thea, I've heard that you recovered your looks. Now, you're the most beautiful woman in Cansington. Also, did your family pick a husband for you?"

"That's right." Thea pulled James to her, making the introductions.

"This is my husband, James."

Xena grabbed the handsome man next to her as well.

"This is my husband, Zach Smith. The Smiths are only second to The Great Four in Cansington."

Zach stared at Thea.

Thea was now famous in Cansington. She was once the ugliest woman, but she was the most beautiful woman now. It was such a drastic change that everyone knew about it.
