

Chapter 240

Thea walked out of the room and was relieved that Xavier was gone.

“You brat!”

Gladys immediately scolded as soon as Thea walked out of the room.

“What’s so good about James? Xavier is from a wealthy family with assets of over one hundred billion! He’s Gavin’s only son and will inherit the family business sooner or later!”

“Mom, I’ve got something to do. I’ll head out first!”

Thea hurriedly ran out the door.

After she left, she phoned James and said, “Darling, I’ll pay a visit to Longevity Pharmaceuticals to ask Yuna for some orders so the Pacific Group call resume production.”

James nodded. “Alright.”

James walked out of the room since Thea was busy

As soon as he walked out of the room, Gladys, who was in the living room, immediately stopped him, “Stop right there!”

“Mom

James walked over awkwardly.

Gladys took out a card and slid it on the table. Then she said indifferently. "There is five hundred thousand in this card. It's some of my savings Take it and divorce Thea immediately You're not worthy of Thea, so stop wasting her time" "Mom, you have savings? Didn't you say you had nothing left when we wanted to buy the car insurance?" David's eyes widened. "Why can't I have some of my own savings? What will our family eat if I don't have anything saved?" Gladys said with a furious expression,

David immediately shut up.

He continued to play with the Firarre's keys in his hand and glanced at James

"James, I admit that you have been doing great with the housework, but...you get the drill. You're not worthy of my sister. Are you capable of buying me a million dollar sports car? You obviously can't, but Zavier can."

James did not know how to react.

He felt that he needed to reveal his identity.

Otherwise, he would have no status at all in this family. "Mom, I have money. The House of Royals also belongs to me," James said helplessly. "Ha! You're a really big liar. Why don't you say that Transgenerational New City is also yours?" David teased.

Jannes nodded. "You're actually right. It is mine."

"D*mu, you're a really big liar that doesn't know your limits. Do you know the value of Transgenerational New City? You're just a broke*ass that will never understand."

"It's really mine. I arranged for Xara to work in the Transgenerational Group with just one phone call."

Gladys looked at James in disgust. This James was good in everything except for being poor and loving to brag about things he did not have

She already knew that Xara got her job because she met the Transgenerational Group's chairman while applying for jobs and was selected.

"James, you have to leave Thea. She won't be happy with you." Gladys scolded him.

He told the truth, but no one believed him.

James was speechless.

"Well, I don't mind. I'll divorce if Thea wants to do it," James stood up and said.

It was boring for him to stay home when Thea was not around.

Plus, he had already instructed Scarlett to prepare the gifts, and they would be delivered soon. The Callahans would surely believe his identity after receiving the gifts. "Mom, look at him. He is getting more and more rebellious. I can't believe Thea. Didn't he only heal her scars? Is it necessary for her to be so fond of him? She can just give him some money to thank him," David cursed furiously.

The Watsons were a very low-profile family but famous for their influence.

They simply gave out million-dollar gifts, a luxurious car, and a villa worth hundreds of millions so easily

He could easily walk outside with his head up high with such an influential brother-in-law.

He might also get a villa if Thea and Xavier married.

The more he thought about it, the more excited he became

"Mom, we must make James and Thea get a divorce!"

"Of course! They must divorce!" Gladys nodded and agreed.

The whole family began to discuss how to get the two to divorce.

Meanwhile, James went to Common Clinic to chat with Henry. He did not know many people in Cansington. Henry and Thea were the only people he was close with.

The only one he could open up to was Henry

Henry had opened the clinic.
