Chapter 691 James yawned. His exhaustion seeped into his very bones. He needed to rest. After sating the curiosity of the relentless reporters, he turned and got on the convoy. He spoke to the driver once again, "Alright, let's get going. Enter the Black Dragon Palace." "Understood."

The driver restarted the engine. Under the watchful gaze of the crowd, it slowly made its way into the Black Dragon Palace.

News of James' interview spread. It was translated into different languages all over the world.

In the Callahans' residence in Cansington... Thea just woke up. She had not been sleeping well recently. She had been keeping tabs on the situation at the battlefield every moment she could. She prayed that bloodshed could be avoided. After a few days of inactivity on the battlefield, she began to feel relieved. "Thea, quick! Over here! Something big's happened!" She heard David yelling for her the moment she got out of her room. She had been listless all this while. She could not bring herself to do anything. She walked over to David and sat beside him. She then asked disinterestedly, "What is it? Why do you look so stunned?"

David cried out excitedly, "The allied forces of the twenty-eight nations have withdrawn from Southern Plains City, and the Black Dragon army has reclaimed it. Have a look! This is the latest interview by James. Look at how cool he is in the Black Dragon robe!"

Thea felt as if she had been instantly snapped awake. She swiftly grabbed the phone from David.

"May I have a few minutes of your time?"

"Five minutes. Ask away."

It was a normal conversation.

Then, she stood up and ran back into her room. In her room, she pulled her phone out and rewatched James' interview. Her eyes were fixated on James in his Black Dragon robe. "He's so handsome..." Thea was infatuated with him. She had never thought of James as a handsome-looking man. Now, things were different.

There was no more possibility of her being with him ever again.

At the same time, at the Emperor's Mansion in the Capital...

The Emperor was enraged.

"Worthless garbage! All of them!"

He was lashing out in the room.

He had warned Floyd to be vigilant.

However, the man paid no heed to his warnings.

"How did he manage to sneak into a city protected by a three-million-strong army and take out all the generals? Are they all trash?!"

Chapter 692 The Emperor was furious. Several women knelt on the floor quivering in fear.

After letting out his frustrations, the Emperor composed himself.

He sat on the sofa and lit a cigarette. . He devised this plot to kill James. Now, not only was he not dead, he had even performed a great service for Sol. With greater fame and prestige, it would be even harder to kill him now.

James had to die.

Smoking his cigarette, he thought of ways to finish James off. "Looks like I need to turn to that old man for help." After a long while, the Emperor murmured. He stood up hastily. "Prepare the car." The Emperor left the Capital and headed toward a mountain in the suburbs. The mountain was called the Five Monasteries Mountain, named for the monastery at its peak The Emperor headed to the top of the mountain.

Chapter 693 In the Black Dragon Palace in the Southern Plains... James was severely lacking in sleep. The moment he reached the Black Dragon Palace, he immediately made a beeline toward his bed and fell fast asleep. He slept throughout the day. Growl –

James got up and rubbed his tummy.

He looked outside. The sky was already dark. Then, he grabbed his phone and looked at the time. It was eight in the evening. He noticed there were quite a few missed calls and messages. They were all from Quincy. He frowned and murmured, "What's this woman up to?"

He ignored the messages. He simply got dressed and left. Many ordinary citizens and reporters gathered outside the Black Dragon Palace. Some were holding bouquets, while others held banners up high. Many fully-armed soldiers guarded the entrance of the Black Dragon Palace. With their backs straightened, they were there to keep the crowd in check. James' biggest worry was people causing a fuss about him. After getting a glimpse of the crowd, he immediately turned back. "Black Dragon..." "Dragon General, don't leave!" Upon seeing James, the crowd bubbled with excitement. "Over here, James!"

Levi reported everything in detail. "He brought the convoys to the twenty-eight nations and is currently in the negotiation process. The international community is paying close attention to this, and the whole process was broadcasted live. At the negotiating table, the representatives of the twenty-eight nations were at a loss of words when faced against Black Shadow General's eloquent argument."

James grinned satisfactorily. "I knew he was the right guy for this. Instruct him to pressure the twenty-eight nations. If they don't comply in giving up their territory, the Black Dragon army will raze them to the ground,"

"Understood." Levi nodded.

“By the way, write an application and send it to the Capital.”

Levi tilted his head quizzically. “What application?”

James said, “The assassins played a crucial role in the assassination of the generals of the twenty-eight nations and the retaking of Southern Plains City. I’m planning to write an application to formally request the higher-ups to give them all a position.”

“Understood.” Levi nodded.

Chapter 694 Soon, James had finished eating. He wiped his lips. “Alright now, you’re free to go. Call the assassins here.” “Alright.”

Levi quickly cleared up the dishes. After that, he left.

Soon, May and the others were here. Looking at the assassins before him, James said, “We can drop the formalities, guys. Have a seat.”

Hearing this, they took their seats.

When they faced James back in Cansington, they did not feel that intimidated by him.

Now, facing him as the Black Dragon in his Black Dragon robe, they could feel an inexplicable pressure. It was suffocating.

James looked at them. “You were instrumental to the assassination of the enemy generals. I’ve written an application to the higher-ups requesting that you be given a position. Once they agree to it, you’ll be deputy commanders of the Black Dragon army- the elite of the elite.”

This was a high-ranking position.

This was proof that James recognized their abilities.

They said in unison.

"Thank you for giving us a title." James stood up and said with a grim expression. "From today onwards, you'll be the Elite Eight of the Black Dragon army, the most elite of our forces. The Southern Plains require your protection. This is a huge responsibility for you to shoulder. Do you understand?"

James said solemnly.

Their blood was boiling.

They never expected they would become the Elite Eight of the Black Dragon army, which was tasked with protecting the borders of Sol.

They also knew that the world would be shocked once news of the formation of the Elite Eight spread throughout the world.

That was because they were instrumental in the assassination of the enemy generals.

"We'll keep your reminder at heart."

The eight of them said in unison.

James looked at them and said with finality, "You're now comrades-in-arm. I hope you'll open up to one another. I do not wish to see any form of infighting and back-stabbing here. You're now brothers and sisters. You can leave your back to the other and trust them wholeheartedly." "Divided, and you'll be conquered. United, and you'll be invincible."

Chapter 695 After giving them brief instructions, James dismissed them.

The Black Dragon Palace once again fell into silence.

James headed to the rooftop on the third floor. Leaning against a chair, he smoked his cigarette while gazing at the starry sky.

He thought of the people in Cansington.

James hung up the phone.

Then, he leaned against the chair and lifted his head to look at the starry sky.

Chapter 696 Quincy walked over to James.

She wore a red slip dress that exposed her shoulders. Her red curly hair flowed in the wind. Her facial features were fine and exquisite, and the lipstick she wore complimented her beauty.

She smirked at James who was sitting in a chair with wine bottles on the floor. "You look like you're having a great life."

James got up and gestured to the seat beside him, "Have a seat. No need to be formal." Quincy sat opposite James. She adjusted her dress slightly and covered her legs to prevent herself from flashing him with her underwear.

James did not notice her minute actions. He grabbed a bottle of wine and tossed it to her. Then, he smiled at her. "I'm bored of drinking this by myself. I need someone to talk to."

Quincy noticed that the alcohol content in the bottle James handed her was quite high. "I can't drink this. Do you have red wine?"

"Yes, hold on. I'll go get some."

James got up and went to the wine cellar to grab a few bottles of red wine. He gave Quincy a bottle. Meanwhile, he opened a bottle of white wine and swallowed a big gulp. Then, he asked her, "Weren't you living happily in Cansington? Why did you come all the way here to the Southern Plains? This is a chaotic place. Aren't you afraid of danger?"

"Well, I have you here." Quincy grinned back at him.

All this while, Quincy had kept her thoughts to herself. This time, she laid everything bare. She came to the Southern Plains from Cansington to pursue her happiness. She wanted to tell James all that she felt. "I love you, James. Forget Thea. Can't you give us another chance?" Although she was drunk, she meant every word that came out of her mouth. She wore a pleading look.

"You're drunk. Let me bring you downstairs."

James did not give her a response. He simply helped her downstairs.

He put her on a sofa on the first floor.

Almost immediately, she fell asleep. James sat by her side and smoked a cigarette. After smoking, he pulled his phone out and called Levi. Soon, Levi arrived "What happened, sir?"

James stood up and looked at the sleeping Quincy, Then, he sighed and ordered, "Send her back to Cansington safely"

Levi glanced at Quincy and gently nodded, "Understood. I'll see to it immediately."

Chapter 697 Quincy was drunk and fell unconscious. She did not know how long she had slept. She slowly woke up and rubbed her temples.

After a while, she got up and realized she was in a hotel. Her bag and her laptop were on the table beside the bed.

She pulled her phone out of the bag and looked at the time. It was four in the morning.

"How did I get so drunk?".

Her mind was a blur.

She remembered James inviting her for a drink.

She remembered telling him her thoughts. After that, her memory was blank.

Quincy glimpsed at her phone and noticed the location it displayed. "Cansington? I'm back in Cansington!?" She was stunned.

After a few seconds, realization dawned on her. Her eyes filled with tears.

The night passed silently.

The next day...

Sol and the rest of the world were taken by storm by the news that very morning.

The Black Shadow General of the Southern Plains had led a team of envoys to Ishkabar to negotiate with the heads-of-state of the twenty-eight nations. Through a series of relentless pressure and blackmail, the twenty-eight nations decided to cede five cities to Sol. Upon hearing this news, the world was shocked.

Everyone in Sol cheered.

“Long live the Dragon General!” “Hmph! Who do the twenty-eight nations think they are? Invading Sol? They must be tired of living!” “Black Shadow General is so cool! I love him!” The Soleans erupted into cheers.

The netizens were celebrating the news too.

Meanwhile, Henry had returned.

A helicopter slowly landed in a military region, Many were gathered there. In its lead was James in his Black Dragon robe. Behind him were the Elite Eight and many generals and lieutenants of the Black Dragon army. The helicopter landed.

Chapter 698 Henry in his military uniform got off the helicopter. Behind him were the envoys of Sol.

“Sir, the negotiations were a resounding success.”

Henry walked over to James with a bright smile.

They embraced and laughed out loud.

“You’ve done well. From now on, the borders of the Southern Plains will be at peace, and you’ve become a national hero. Your name will go down in history and be remembered by Soleans generations to come.” Henry smiled bashfully. “It’s all thanks to you, sir. I’m just an errand boy.”

“Reporting~” At that moment, Levi ran over to them and saluted James. James acknowledged him. “What’s wrong?”

Levi exclaimed ecstatically, “I heard from the Capital that the Supreme Commander and King of Sol are heading here to the Southern Plains to confer you a title.”

James scratched his nose. “I’m already one of the five commanders-in-chief. What title is there left?”

Henry beamed proudly. “Congratulations, sir.” “Alright now, stop kissing my *ss. Let’s have a few drinks.” Shoulder to shoulder, James left with Henry under the watchful gaze of the generals. At a food stall in the Southern Plains...

Many extended their congratulations.

James thanked them all.

“Congratulations, James.” The Emperor walked over to him smiling all the while. James glanced at him and said, “I couldn’t have done it without you.”

“Haha...”

They laughed in unison.

After conferring the title, the Supreme Commander left. So did the others accompanying him.

Only when the powerful people from the Capital left did the military region erupt into loud, roisterous cheering. “Dragon King! Dragon King!” They all chanted passionately.

Chapter 699

The conferring of title was not disclosed to the public. Only a few were aware of the event.

The Southern Plains’ military region was in a festive mood. “Congratulations, Dragon General...” Henry approached James with a bright smile. “No, wait. It should be the Dragon King now.” “Okay, I get it. Stop buttering me up.” James gestured for him to stop.

He cared little about these titles.

Levi walked over to him and asked, “What should we do about the 140 cities handed over by the twenty-eight nations?”

James rubbed his temples.

This was a difficult question.

“Call for a conference.”

James got up and headed to the conference room.

In the conference room at the military region headquarters...

Elite Eight and the generals of the Black Dragon army gathered. James sat loud, “Each of the twenty-eight nations has ceded five cities to Sol. Although they are small in size, the combined area of the territories is massive. According to our information, there are a total of 300 ethnicities and a combined population of 100 million distributed

James ordered, "Bring the Elite Eight with you. They are highly trained and will be helpful to your mission."

Henry nodded. Then, he asked, "We have to rename the cities, don't we? We also have to reorganize the structure of governance by drawing up new provinces and establishing new townships and districts to properly manage it. I think we should strive to make it a megalopolis. Although it's impossible to surpass Cansington, it shouldn't be too far behind either."

Henry went on and on.

"We need to have a ten-year plan. In ten years, we'll construct a world-class city!" James did not expect Henry to be so politically astute. James then looked at the generals and asked, "What do you guys think?" "The Black Shadow General is right."

"I also believe we must properly plan this. However, to grow our prestige, we need to have militarized schools."

"We should garrison each city with an army and strive to create the safest cities in the world."

Everyone shared their opinions.

Chapter 700 The King of Sol had conferred James the title of Dragon King and gave him authority to manage the newly acquired cities. Everyone gave their own suggestions on how to best manage the cities.

“In that case, we need to have a proper plan. However, since we’re all military men, we know little about this. We should seek assistance from some brilliant and capable politicians from inland here to help us administer the cities.”

Henry asked, “What should we name our cities then? You’re the Dragon King, the one who rules over these cities. You should be the one naming them.”

“Just come up with random names.”

James tried to dismiss him. He could not care less about naming the cities.

Henry persisted. “That won’t do. This has historical significance. This event will go down in the history books and be read by Soleans for generations to come. We must give this the consideration it deserves.” “What about Theaville?”

James suggested.
