Chapter 731

The night passed silently,

The next day...

Gloom arrived early in the morning.

In the room.

James and Gloom discussed the details of their mission for a while.

He wanted Gloom to arrange the Elite Eight into the Red Flame army and get them stationed at the prison entrance.

The Red Flame army was responsible for the Capital's safety. A soldier had to go through multiple reviews before finally being assessed by the Red Flame army's General. Only after a series of assessments would one be accepted as an official member.

Gloom was the King's personal bodyguard but did not have a military rank and stayed in the shadows. Despite that, he was in great authority.

He was basically the representative of the King. It would not be challenging for him to arrange May and the others into the Red Flame army. In fact, it could even be said to be a cinch for him.

“Alright, leave it to me.” Gloom nodded. He glanced at the feeble James and said, “You’ll have to be cautious after this. The Emperor will suspect you for Blake’s prison break and will surely target you again.”

“Okay.”

James nodded gently. Gloom did not say anything more and turned to leave the room.

Living room Gloom looked at the eight people and ordered, “Follow me. I’ll arrange you guys into the Red Flame army.” They nodded and left with Gloom. After everyone was gone, Quincy walked into the room and asked, “James, have you settled everything?”

James nodded and instructed, “Yeah. You can go buy the stuff for me.”

“Just a second...” James stopped Quincy from leaving. She turned around and asked, “Yeah? Is there something else you need?”

James thought for a while and said, “Forget it. Some medicinal materials will be hard to get in the Capital, I’ll get Jay to get them for me and send them over. You can help me pick them up later.”

“Okay,” Quincy casually replied.

James waved his hand, gesturing for her to leave.

Quincy turned around and left the room, not forgetting to close the door. Then, James picked up his phone from the table and called Jay.

“Jay, I need your help to get some medicinal materials.”

Jay’s brows furrowed after answering James’ call. He had already helped James a lot in the past and was no longer willing to assist him.

However, James got a hold of his biggest secret-his identity as Jake Graham. If James leaked the news, the Blithe King would raze his base in an instant. After weighing the pros and cons, he nodded and agreed. “Alright. Send me the list of stuff you need.”

James hung up the phone. Then, he sent Jay the list of medicinal materials he needed, asking him to send them over through expedited express.

Jay quickly made arrangements. After picking up the medicinal materials from his personal inventory and sent them to James.

He specifically used an express delivery to deliver the package to James' residing hotel before dark. Once it arrived, James stayed in the hotel room to make some medicine. Fortunately, Quincy was there to help him. Otherwise, it would be challenging for him to complete the production in his current physical state. He successfully made the medicines he needed in one night. The next morning.

May had returned.

With Gloom's help, the Elite Eight had successfully become members of the Red Flame army and were tasked with guarding the underground prison.

James took out the medicines he had prepared and handed them to May.

"This is sleeping gas. Once you open the bottle, the drug will emit into the air and immediately cause one to faint. This is the antidote for it. "And this one is a poison I made. Force Blake to take it before breaking him out." James handed over the things he made to May and carefully explained their functions to her. May listened carefully and memorized them. "You remember everything?"

“Yeah.”

“Alright. You’re dismissed. Remember to follow the plan and don’t hurt anyone if possible. You’re allowed to attack if you’re life is in danger or your identity is exposed.”
