Chapter 1995

Chapter 1995 Extra 2

Sasha quickly tugged Sebastian's hand to lead him over to the spot. To their surprise, it was a tiny mound. There was nothing on it but a rare sacred fig planted beside it. Its thick trunk and luxuriant leaves protected the mound firmly.

"This was planted by Master. In fact, he planted this before I came to this temple. Ever since I came here, I had been seeing him meditating here day and night." "Why did he come here to meditate?"

"That's because the old master of the temple says there's something buried under this place that belongs to Master's old friend. He had been doing this for decades until you two showed up," the monk said truthfully.

Sasha froze. As she turned around, she saw that Sebastian's face had been drained of color, and he was staring fixedly at the mound. He was so still as if his feet were rooted to the ground.

The old friend was, of course, none other than Frieda. Sasha could not help but wonder how Shin had endured all the pain for so many years.

Rather than telling the world that Eddie had forced him to stay in the temple, Shin had chosen to imprison himself here to atone for his sins, repent and drown in guilt.

Perhaps while he was meditating in front of the sacred fig, he had wondered if Frieda would not have had such a tragic end if he did not insist on marrying her.

Sadly, there was no turning back.

Sebastian went over to the mound slowly and lowered his head to see a stone that was polished until it was smooth. Finally, he shut his eyes and asked, "So, is he free from his misery now?"

“Sebastian, Master had already resigned to his fate long ago. He suffered a lot of persecution when he was forced to become the devil of Aquene Temple. The only reason he could hang on till now was his strong will and worry for you. Now that both matters have been resolved, it was only a matter of time before he passed away,” the monk said calmly.

He was not sad about the happenings. Rather, he felt a sense of relief when he saw that his master was finally free from his decades of suffering there.

Maybe this is the difference between religion and the world.

Sebastian said nothing else.

He merely stood there, still holding on to the children’s bracelet that had faded in color, and stared at them in a daze.

Sasha asked sadly, “He kept these for you, didn’t he? He didn’t get to bring them back before something happened to you and your mom.”

She had finally proven that the elder did not choose to become a monk.

In truth, he had been praying for his loved ones and keeping the children’s bracelet all that while. The most basic requirement to become a monk was to be free of desires and emotions.

Shin, however, had failed to do that.

He had been thinking of Frieda and Sebastian all the time. He just did not want or have the guts to admit it. If it were not for the letter and the medal, he would probably continue suffering for a long time.

When Sasha left the temple with Sebastian, she was still feeling sorrowful and even guilty.

She felt that Shin would not have died if not for her arrangement.

“Darling, I’m sorry. I—”

“Look! The flowers have bloomed!” Holding her hand, Sebastian suddenly pointed at the bush that had withered in the winter.

Sasha was puzzled.

Flowers?

She turned to look in the same direction.

It was the coldest season and withered plants were scattered all over the temple entrance. Yet, she saw tiny purple flowers blooming under the sun in the withered bush.

What flowers are these?

Sasha inched over, lowering her head to study it. It was at that moment that she realized it was a seedling that had grown from the fallen seeds of the sacred fig.

The seedling was on the purplish spectrum, which made it look like a flower at a glance.

The sacred fig is blooming...

The couple pulled out a huge batch of it.

Sasha asked, "Are you sure you want to plant it at Oceanic Estate?"

Sebastian replied, "I'm going to give some to the three of them."

Sasha was nonplussed.

Will a plant like this survive after transplantation? Besides, he wants to give it to the other three. One of them is in Southeast Astoria, another is in Yartran, and the last one is nowhere to be found. Will this plant...

Still, Sasha said nothing. After packing the seedling, both of them went home.

As soon as they arrived at Oceanic Estate, they recounted the entire story to the family members who had been waiting for them. Everyone was stunned after listening to the story. Jonathan, especially, fell silent for a long time.

Sasha and Sebastian were worried when they noted his reaction.

To their surprise, Jonathan merely felt depressed for a short while. After that, he had been fine until the fifteenth of the month.

Chapter 1996

Chapter 1996 Extra 3

The new year had begun, and everyone became busy once more. The newlyweds, Ian and Susan, planned on leaving for Southeast Astoria on the sixteenth. Ian was now the person in charge over there, so he had to rush over. After all, Hayes Corporation's growth over there over the past six months had been tremendous.

Sasha could only help them with the packing. "Mom, there is no need to pack so many things. We can buy everything we need there."

Susan was terrified when she looked at her mother-in-law. Sasha ignored her and continued packing for the two of them.

Once she was done packing for them, she moved on to packing for Vivian and Kurt. Vivian was in Yartran at the time while Kurt was working in a construction company in Gronga.

That made Sasha worry. "When are you two going to live together? Seriously, it's so troublesome for me to pack two sets of everything," she complained. She felt a headache coming as she looked at the items in front of her that came in pairs.

Kurt's ears turned red, for he still felt a little shy when hearing those words from an elder.

Vivian, on the other hand, wasn't bothered at all. Seeing how troubled her mother was, she said, "We're already living together. Just one set is enough." Sasha was dumbstruck. "Huh?"

Kurt was utterly speechless. The situation became even more awkward. He couldn't help but turn his head to look in another direction.

After packing for two of her kids, Sasha focused on packing Matteo's things. She was going to get Devin to hand everything to Matteo when he dropped Natalie and Nina there.

Nina will be fine. She's a big girl now and is independent and smart. The one I'm more worried about is Nat. "Nat, remember to behave and listen to your uncle, okay?" Sasha looked at her, who was playing the piano, and stroked her head.

Natalie didn't respond. Her tiny hands kept dancing away on the piano, and at that moment, she looked so much like her talented father.

Sasha let out a sigh. Just as she was about to look for Devin, Natalie piped up, "I don't want to leave anymore." "Huh?" Sasha turned to look at Natalie. "What did you just say? You don't want to leave?"

"Yes, I'm not leaving. I want to stay here and learn from you. I have decided that I want to become a doctor like you. That way, I can treat many patients and save them."

Natalie was still playing the piano as she spoke to Sasha. She sounded as if she was chatting casually with the latter when in fact she had announced a huge decision.

Sasha was stunned.

It took her some time before she made her way to Natalie.

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, I am. I will study hard so that I'll get accepted into the best university in the world. After that, I will become the best doctor there is!"

Natalie, who had just started middle school, finally stopped playing the piano.

She turned away from the piano and looked into Sasha's eyes. At that moment, the glow in Natalie's eyes was just as bright as that of her mother. Sasha had never seen such determination and clarity in anybody's eyes before. A doctor...

Sasha stared at Natalie for quite some time before she finally smiled, tears rolling down her cheeks. She reached out and hugged the child tightly.

She's finally opening up! She has taken her first step and is dealing with her grief. Maybe that is what makes her realize that she wants to be a doctor. She witnessed how her father died after all. It's only natural that would inspire her to become a doctor and save others.

Sasha was so touched that she couldn't control herself.

"Okay, I'll promise you this. As long as this is what you truly want, I will do everything I can to send you to the best school and help you become a great doctor."

"Okay." Natalie nodded. The Jadesons were excited and pleased when they heard the news. They canceled Natalie's flight tickets and helped set everything up so she could stay in the country and study. That meant that Nina was the only one left.

Kurt suggested, "Natalie's not leaving anymore, so maybe you should stay too. It'd be nice to study together."

Nina refuted, "Why should I stay? She's her own person and so am I. I've been studying well there, so why should I give up just because she doesn't want to leave anymore?"

This little brat doesn't respect her big brother at all! Kurt's face clouded over. Fortunately, Sasha was around and saw what was going on. She immediately stepped forward to stop the siblings from arguing.

"It's fine. If Nina wants to go, then we should let her go. I heard that she did really well over well. Kids always get excited when they meet teachers and peers who inspire them. This will be good for her." "But—"

"Okay, I'm putting an end to this discussion. You don't need to worry about any of this. All I want is for you to take care of Vivi for me. I will make sure Nina is fine."

Sasha only wanted to get rid of her future son-in-law. Nina was rather mature, so she wasn't that worried. Vivian, on the other hand, had never learned how to be independent because Kurt had basically spent the last few years spoiling her. That was why she was worried more about Vivian.

In the end, Kurt had no choice but to leave. Nina was delighted, and she left with Devin that very night.
