

My Baby's Daddy Chapter 1749

The girl raised her hands. With the best effort she could muster, she tried her best to recount how much the grass had hurt her hand, trying her best to get her mother's consolation. "Oh, did you hurt your hands?"

"Here, I'll blow on it for you." Anastasia blew the girl's chubby hands and kissed them. Finally, the girl cracked a happy smile, and her slight grievance was finally sent off to the sea.

The island felt particularly languid in the afternoon. Clear blue skies and vast calm seas. Lots of the guests took the chance to have fun in the ocean. The older guests took a nap and prepared for the wedding dinner.

Queenie wanted to play as well, but she was in no condition for that. The first trimester was one of suffering as she couldn't eat or sleep well—things were hard on her. Nevertheless, she told Jessie to seize the chance to have fun. It wasn't every day she had a vacation, so she should make the most out of it. "Get Julian. He can go with you. Dad and Mom are chatting with their friends as well." That was what Queenie told her.

Jessie was in a sprightly mood. Sleeping was the last thing on her mind—she wanted to have fun! The moment Julian got her call, he came to see her. They took a stroll through the area with coconut trees before emerging on the beach. Since everyone was far away from them, they had the whole beach to themselves. Jessie gasped in surprise and charged to the beach like a happy child. "Gilmore, you have to come down here!" She called his last name by accident. The girl was too happy to notice that.

me whatever she wants. I need to change too excited." She never called him by his last name. Most of the time, it would on, you're calling me Julian," he

I think Mr. Gilmore

calling me

Jessie nodded. "Okay,

"Good. From now on,

he wants. She nodded in acknowledgment. Then, she scooped up some seawater. "Wow, it's not cold at all.

want to

She blinked. "Can I?"