

My Baby's Daddy Chapter 1756

"Wait. You're staying up?" "Yeah. I can't sleep, so I texted a few friends. We're going to play some video games," Julian chuckled. Jessie sat up and held his arm. "I'm more important than your games. You're not leaving."

Huh. Julian just wanted an excuse to leave. If he stayed around for any longer, he might let his inner beast loose. "So, you want me to stay?" Hoarsely, he asked, "You do know what that means, right?"

Jessie pursed her lips. It embarrassed her to say this, but still, she mustered the courage to speak. "I know. I'm not a kid anymore." Julian gulped. He leaned down and held her hands above her head. "You won't regret this?"

"I won't." She stared right back at him. I won't regret this. "Why are you doing this?" he asked huskily. Because of love? I don't want to force her.

"I-I don't want you to come down with another cold. Enough with the cold water and shower." That was the only excuse she could come up with at the time.

that she loved him. He turned the night lights off, plunging the room into darkness. The only sources of light came from the moon and the twinkling stars outside. The air on Jessie's forehead, while she rested her head against his chest, his arm acting as her pillow. The look on her face spoke of satisfaction, while her nightdress sense of responsibility filled him. He knew he had one more thing to protect now. He kissed her did. She stared at Julian like an innocent doe, then she buried her face this shy last night," daylight now. I can't do as I please, not when it's

"Want to get up?"

lie in your bed and sleep in until noon." Jessie of sunshine out, and they