Chapter 1771 Getting Bombarded by Reporters

Many young women in the crowd were extremely jealous as they watched the man whom they idolized reveal his relationship with Jessie. It was like a pang in their hearts!

"If there are no other questions, let's wrap up this event!" Once Julian finished his words, he gave the microphone to one of the staff and left hand-in-hand with Jessie.

When she descended the stage, many fans squeezed toward her. At that, Julian immediately pulled her into his arms to shield her from the crowd, hugging her figure so she would not get squeezed. Meanwhile, the bodyguards immediately came over and guided them toward the green room.

Like both of them had guessed, Vincent was so furious that his mustache curled up, resembling a handlebar mustache. Julian had abandoned his scheduled advertising campaign and gone to Jessie's campaigning venue. As if he thought Vincent had not had enough, he publicized their relationship! They had invested giant funds in this movie, and they no longer had any high hopes for it. Instead, all they were hoping was that they could break even.

Meanwhile, the couple's announcement had spread like wildfire on the Internet and even caused a network to crash.

Julian, the most brilliant man in the entertainment industry, was suddenly revealed to be taken. How could his fans not be saddened by such news?

Therefore, a rise of netizens claimed they would not be supporting them. Many of his female fans clamored to announce that they would boycott the movie as well. Just as they had expected, the loudest protest came from the female fans.

When Julian brought Jessie back to the company, Vincent was furious but did not dare to throw a fit. Not only that, but he even had an uncomfortable time suppressing his anger. "Julian, didn't we reach an agreement earlier? Can't you bear with it just for a while? What you did will only cause a huge impact on our movie and affect the box office sales."

Julian did not comment while Jessie comforted Vincent. "Director Cooper, don't be mad. Here, have some tea and cool down."

Following that, Vincent accepted the tea and drank it. Since he was still angry, he choked on the tea and began coughing fiercely, clutching his chest.

"Oh, no! Director Cooper, are you alright?" She immediately reached out and patted his back in concern. Did we trigger his sickness or something?

"I choked on the tea," he explained bitterly before looking at Julian with a defeated expression. I can't scold him, nor can I beat him up, and I even have to think twice before saying anything lest I want to lose my job. This is so exasperating.

“Vincent, stop worrying! As for the box office sales, let’s leave it to fate!” Julian spoke some words of concern before turning to Jessie. “Let’s go home!”

She nodded and assured Vincent, “Director Cooper, there is nothing to worry about. The movie is amazing.”

Vincent admired her utter calmness in this situation, but it was not unexpected. Even if her first movie ended as a disaster, she still had her identity as Mrs. Julian Gilmore, so her situation would not be any worse than the other celebrities.

In the meantime, Jessie and Julian arrived outside the parking lot. Several black MPVs parked on the side, and dozens of reporters were waiting for them to appear before surrounding the two.

“Mr. Gilmore! Are you and Miss Silverstein dating?”

“When are you getting married?”

“When did you guys start dating?”

“Miss Silverstein, are you pregnant?”

Jessie was taken aback by that question, but she still politely waved her hand and denied being pregnant. "No, I'm not. We're not thinking of having children at the moment." Julian held her hand and turned to look at the bodyguards, who immediately came over and shielded them until they entered the car.

Inside the vehicle, she noticed that the reporters had no intentions of leaving and were constantly tapping on the car.

"I feel sorry for Director Cooper." She sighed. He reached over and held her hand. "How about you? Are you worried about the box office sales?" After giving it some serious thought, she answered, "No. I'm not worried about your fans boycotting the movie either because I'm your fan too. Perhaps, I would feel disappointed after knowing you're taken, but that doesn't stop me from liking you! So, yes, I'll still watch your movie." She was explaining things from a fan's point of view.
