Chapter 1621 On the Cusp

“Quiet. I don’t want anyone to find out, so lay low,” Jessie hissed.

Still, her friend gave her a tight hug. “You’re so lucky, Jessie. Julian called you? The Julian Gilmore? So, you have his number? You have to give it to me.”

“And will you call him even if I do?” Jessie smiled.

Lexie lowered her head sheepishly. “No.”

Jessie touched the back of her head. He actually was worried about me. She felt a little sweet about it.

Chapter 1622 The Meeting

The couple arrived at Julian’s suite, and Julian scanned Queenie from head to toe. “She looks just like you.”

“And when can she come?”

“She’s still at work, but I told her to meet me here. She should be here in a bit.”

Queenie wanted to look for Jessie herself, but since Jessie was working, she decided to wait.

The sun was setting, dragging out Jessie’s shadow behind her.

Her hair billowed in the wind, and she found herself standing before the hotel. Nervously, she called Julian.

The moment Julian's phone rang, he picked up his phone while saying, "She's here, Queenie. My assistant will bring her to us."

"Thanks."

Julian then answered the call. "Are you here, Jessie?"

Jessie nodded. She thought this woman felt familiar. No matter who she was, Jessie was willing to do the test.

A car was waiting for them outside. Queenie and Nigel led Jessie downstairs. Just as they stepped into the elevator, the two ladies stared at Queenie and Jessie. One of them asked curiously, "Are you twins? You look alike."

Queenie and Jessie exchanged a smile. Yeah, we are. Even others think we're twins.

Julian finally understood what she was talking about, which was a miracle. Ever since he debuted, he never ran into the dark side of the industry.

"Even if you weren't my sister, I'd still help you and the orphanage," Queenie said.

Jessie's eyes lit up, and she held Queenie's hand gratefully. "Really? You don't have to help me, but it'd be great if you could help the kids."

"Yes. I can donate a sum of money to the orphanage every year and tide them over." Queenie nodded seriously.

The gentlemen exchanged a look. They had a feeling these women were real sisters. There was something similar about them; something kind and innocent.

“Is she the one who harassed you today, Jessie?” Julian suddenly turned around.

Jessie was a little surprised. Is he trying to help me?

“What did you say to him? I never harassed you.” Mabel was miffed. She couldn’t believe Jessie would snitch on her. Now he’s going to think I’m evil. This is all her fault.

Jessie was scared. On the one hand, she had to face the lead actress of the set she was in, on the other, she had to answer Julian. This was a hard case to settle.

Julian saw through her, and he smiled. “Don’t worry. I’m here. Nobody can force you to lie.”

That amused Julian. “I thought you were a thief.”

“I didn’t mean it. My friend was arguing with your fans and she shoved me by accident, so I grabbed onto you.

Your bodyguards scared me, so I yanked the necklace off,” she explained sheepishly.

Julian sat down and rested his chin on his hand. He thought she was cute when she explained things.

As the older sister, Queenie was calm and collected, while as the younger sister, Jessie was adorable.

“It’s alright. I don’t blame you.” He even poured some tea for her, much to her surprise.

Jessie stood up.

Just then, someone opened the door.

Before Jessie could tell what was going on, someone dashed toward her and gave her a big hug.

If she hadn’t done that, he would have missed her.

Even though they were in the same industry, he might never see her again.

She was a stuntwoman who could never show her face on camera.

Even if Queenie could find her, it would take a while.

For some reason, he thought fate guided him to this meeting.

Of all nights he could lose his necklace, it had to be the night she showed up, and she even took it with her, which led to this meeting.

“Are you still working, Jessie? I’d like you to meet Dad and Mom as soon as possible,” Queenie asked.

Well, I crossed Mabel. I can’t be her stuntwoman anymore, so I’ll quit tomorrow.

I don't care about the money. I want to see my family.

"I'll quit my job tomorrow and go home with you," Jessie answered.

Julian arched his eyebrow. "You don't have to work as a stuntwoman anymore.

“Oh, someone got herself a new boss.

the director remarked sarcastically.

“I’m sorry.”

“If you leave halfway through, I won’t pay you.”

“I know. I won’t be coming tomorrow, then.”

Chapter 1629 Nigel Has a Thought

Julian was sitting beside Jessie.

Though he was reading a book, he couldn't help but notice the beautiful face that was just within his range of sight.

Wisps of black hair were scattered across her gentle, attractive features.

Julian's heart stirred a little. He was too distracted to read.

In the end, he put his book down and glanced at Nigel, who was taking a nap with Queenie nestled in his arms.

Nigel clearly didn't sleep well last night.

It was as if Julian was the only one who had a good night's rest.

Just then, the plane hit a bout of turbulence and Jessie was startled awake.

In her fright, her hands scrambled to grab onto something and ended up grabbing onto Julian's arm.

Jessie had never gone on a plane ride before. She was noticeably pale with anxiety.

"Relax. Everything's fine. It's just a bit of turbulence." Julian patted Jessie on the shoulder.

"Don't think about that. I'm sure our youngest daughter's fine, wherever she is."

All these years, Maggie had turned to spiritual beliefs to relieve her aching soul, yet no matter what she tried, she couldn't come to terms with reality.

Just then, a maid came running over.

"Mr. and Mrs. Silverstein, Miss Queenie is back! I just saw Mr. Manson's car."

"She's back at last! I wonder what's the important thing that she insisted on telling us about."

"It could be about the engagement," Maggie suggested. We should start planning Queenie's wedding.

The Silverstein couple stood at the door and watched as Nigel's car pulled into the driveway.

Meanwhile, inside the car, Queenie turned to Jessie and said, "You get down first, Jessie."

Jessie caught on to what Queenie was trying to do and smiled. "Okay."

Jessie got out of the car and stared at the couple in front of her.

She did her best to hold back all the emotions inside of her as she called out to them, "Mom. Dad."
