Chapter 1671 She Would Overthink

“How is this trifle?! I’m doing you a favor here!” Lisa deliberately faked an event just so she could stay a little longer in his room.

Meanwhile, Jessie had left her room. Though they had agreed to meet at 2.30PM, she still wanted to show up a little earlier. In her hands were two cups of freshly ground coffee she eagerly wanted to share with him.

Just as Jessie wanted to knock on the door, it opened from inside, startling her. The next second, she found Julian answering the door with another woman.

Being an old trouper, Lisa acted practically seamlessly the second she saw Jessie at the door, pretending to have blacked out as she held her forehead and fell limply into Julian’s arms.

As Julian failed to react in time, Lisa successfully hugged him after turning around.

Jessie, on the other hand, quickly realized she had interrupted them. Awkwardly, she said to Julian, “I-I’ll come back later.”

“Jessie!” Julian called out to the young woman, but she still shrewdly returned to her room while her mind was filled with images of Lisa hugging Julian. Lisa was the female lead in Julian’s last production and also an A-lister. Her looks and performance were considered the best.

Can Julian and Lisa also be in this kind of relationship? That's why they'd make out as soon as they meet up, which ended up in the earring being dropped on the couch in the process, right?

While Jessie was deep in her thoughts, an alluring male voice traveled to her ears. "Is the coffee for me?"

"Ah, yes. I got it for you," she answered at once after being pulled back to reality. "Oh, I found this. You should return it to Miss Powers later." With that, she showed him the earring in her hand. Julian furrowed his brows in response. "Where did you find it?"

"On the couch. It's Miss Powers', I assume," she answered with a smile. "Just throw it into the trash can," he ordered. Is he not going to return it?!

"It looks pretty expensive. Are you not going to return it to her?" Jessie asked with surprise.

Julian, for one, saw through Lisa's act right away. So, even if the earring was hers, she had dropped it here on purpose. Obviously, she wanted to use the excuse of finding her earring to get close to him again.

"Leave it on the table then. I'll have my assistant return it to her." Returning it to Lisa will save her from having to come up with another excuse to find me again.

She was so used to Julian's gentleness that his sternness made her feel inexplicably aggrieved all of a sudden. In fact, her eyes began to turn misty. However, she obstinately pursed her lips tight and forced her tears back.

At that, she nodded. "I want to act. I'll definitely get it right."

"You feel stressed when you act alongside me. Go and do it with your assistant instead," urged Julian, asking her to leave.

Jessie left right away, as she would really cry out of grievance if she stayed a second longer. It was honestly absolutely grieving to be told off suddenly when she had been enjoying his gentleness for quite some time.

Lexie happened to be out when she returned to her room, so she headed to the balcony for some fresh air. After taking a few deep breaths and wiping the tears from the corner of her eyes away, she gave herself a pep talk. You're going to act, Jessie Silverstein, and you're going to do it right. Lexie's heart skipped a beat in response. As she felt that Julian Gilmore despised her, her face flushed. Damn, it doesn't feel good!

At that, Julian entered the room. Although the table was spotless, the air in the room still made him frown—an obvious aroma that came uniquely from grilling food over charcoal still filled the space.

"W-What brings you here?" Jessie couldn't help being conscience-stricken. Julian stared judgmentally grim at a certain someone for some time before finally asking, "Why the silence?"

"I've just eaten grilled skewers," Jessie answered honestly in the end.

"And who gave you permission to eat that kind of thing?!" Julian condemned, startling Jessie. She immediately stood straight and drooped her head like a misbehaved child. She didn't even know what to do with her hands.

"You're not allowed to eat this sort of unhygienic food with zero nutrition again, and don't even think about eating covertly!" Julian fumed, then suddenly turned to Lexie. "And you, don't get them for her!"

Of course, since it was for her, Jessie would certainly help herself to the food, for she was genuinely famished.

That said, she couldn't possibly finish it all. So, she asked Lexie to help her out. The poor girl then made more room in her stuffed belly and helped herself to seconds.

"Hey, Jess. I know this restaurant. I heard that their minimum charge is one that we commoners won't dare to spend."

Jessie, too, knew which restaurant Lexie was talking about after checking the logo on the bag, and she felt warm and fuzzy on the inside. Who knew if it had to do with the soup or just herself?

Later, she spent nearly all night studying the script, memorizing as she went. As she had a pretty good memory, she managed to memorize every single word despite the large chunk of text. More than that, even her emotions had become richer.

“What? You dare to do it but can’t stand other people criticizing you for it?” Lisa raised her chin condescendingly.

“I’ve been in this industry long enough to know there are only ever a few tricks simple stunt doubles like you can use to climb to stardom.”

“Yeah? Well, Jessie won’t stoop to that level! She’s far too pure for that!” Lexie retorted.

“Care to share how you get to where you are now, then?” “You and I are barely acquainted, let alone friends.

So why should I tell you?” Jessie monotoned, taking Lisa aback.

“As if you’re worthy enough to be my friend, Silverstein.” “Huh, it’s Jessie who doesn’t want to befriend you.

To think a person can be so shameless!” Lexie fired back again, causing Lisa to turn grimly and glare at her.

“Don’t get cocky, Silverstein.

The higher you go, the harder you fall.” With that, she left smugly.

When Jessie stared at Lisa’s retreating figure, she didn’t sense the animosity from the latter but instead reflected on her incompetence.

The reason Lisa dared to mock her right now as she stood here was that she wasn’t good enough yet.

“You have wire stunts in the afternoon, Jessie.

You think you’re going to be okay?” Vincent asked, to which Jessie nodded with reassurance.

“Absolutely.

This is my forte.” Her answer pleased him, for he didn’t like his actors to use stunt doubles.

At around 2.00PM at the hotel, Julian could no longer sit still after learning about the wire stunts arranged in the afternoon from the crew, so he had his assistant ready the car to head to the set.

He was dressed in all black and even wore a baseball cap as he didn’t want to garner attention.

He was just there to see how the girl was doing and also to make sure she was safe during her wire stunt.

Because of the wire stunt, Jessi didn’t dare overeat.

In the past, she would even do them with an empty stomach as she would be more awake and more agile.

Anything could happen on set, and sure enough, the wire stunt was brought forward as they were missing one of the props for the next scene.

"It's alright." Jessie smiled, and suddenly, a growl traveled in the air—someone's stomach was growling.

The young woman immediately covered her stomach with mortification.

Her stomach was reminding her of her skipped lunch.

"What's wrong? Did you not take lunch?" Julian asked with a frown.

"I try not to eat too much when I have wire stunts." Just then, Lexie rushed over with a cup.

"Jessie didn't eat at all.

All she had was water.

Tell her that it's unacceptable!" At that, Julian turned to his assistant.

"Get her something to eat." "I can still manage a little while longer.

I have another scene soon." Jessie stopped them at once.

Presently, Jessie was seated beside Lexie and drinking some tea to quench her thirst.

Lexie asked, "Where's the supporting actor, Jessie?" Only then did Jessie realize she hadn't heard anything about the supporting actor after so many days.

Where is he? From what I read in the script, there's an important supporting actor that I'm supposed to be in love with, and his character's name is Atlas.

However, I haven't heard anything about him.

She couldn't help but pat the female staff member beside her as she asked in a small voice, "Who's the supporting actor?" "I just learned that the original actor resigned from his role.

After that, Vincent found Fabian Walters to replace him.

If everything goes well, he'll be on set in two days." Jessie and Lexie exchanged glances.

They could hardly contain their urges to scream, for Fabian was an actor they admired.

"Oh, my gosh! Two of the hottest actors are going to battle it out in the movie.

I love it! You're so lucky, Jessie.

You'll be surrounded by two hunks!" In the past, Jessie would've laughed out loud with her, but now, she reckoned that she had to restrain herself.

Having said that, she was pleased to be in the same movie as Fabian.
