

When His Eyes Opened Chapter 2654

Chapter 2654

“I went to Eozambiulle a few years ago.” Layla spoke.

Hazel immediately inquired: “Sister, is Eozambiulle fun? What’s Eozambiulle like?”

“I also went to see the aurora, but I was unlucky and didn’t see it.” Layla said, “I only went to see the northern lights. A city in the north. I just went to see the aurora. On the night I left, there was an aurora. I almost died of anger.”

Hazel couldn’t help laughing.

“I don’t have much of an impression of Eozambiulle because I didn’t stay there for long. I have traveled to many countries, and it is rare for me to be acclimatized to the environment. However, when I went to Eozambiulle, I had a high fever, and the fever was almost 40 degrees, I can’t eat anything.” Recalling that experience, Layla still had a cold sweat on her back.

She had been in good health since she was a child, and rarely had a fever.

When she went to Eozambiulle that time, she probably had a problem eating the food there.

First, she vomited, and after she vomited, she developed a high fever at night.

On the day she watched the aurora, she was very weak, but she still waited for a long time, but she didn’t wait for the aurora to appear.

The next day, her body couldn’t bear it anymore, so she left.

As a result, the aurora appeared after she left.

Sometimes she had to give in; God just didn’t want her to see the aurora at that time.

Later, there were many opportunities to see the aurora, but she was no longer interested.

“If you go to Eozambiulle, prepare all kinds of commonly used medicines. When the time comes, ask your mother to prepare a medicine bag for you and take it with you.” Layla reminded.

“Well. Uncle Mike showed me the photos and videos of the aurora they had seen before. What they saw was a purple aurora, so beautiful.” Hazel exclaimed.

“I know, I ran to watch the Aurora video because I saw it.”

...

At noon, the family had lunch at a restaurant near Layla's house, and then sent Hayden to the airport.

Hayden took longer than usual to return home this time.

He had been looking for Hazel before, and now that she was finally found, he was relieved.

After sending Hayden away, Layla went to the company, and others returned home.

Because Hazel was going to Eozambiulle with Mike and the others, Avery started to prepare luggage and common medicines for Hazel when she got home.

"Mom, have you ever been to Eozambiulle with Dad?" Hazel watched her mother tidy up and chatted with her.

"I've been there, but your dad probably hasn't been there. Your dad doesn't like going to small countries." Avery said, "He can't bear the hardship. Going to those small countries is torture for him. He can't eat well, drink well, or sleep well. It's better to stay at home."

"Honey, am I such a person?" Even if Elliot was such a person, he didn't want Hazel to know.

Elliot wanted to have a perfect image in Hazel's heart.

"I've been to a very small country before, you forgot." Elliot defended himself, saying, "I can endure hardship."

"Oh..." Avery saw that he was in a hurry, so she made amends for him, "Hazel, your father must have been from a small country. After all, the world is so big, and your father has been to many places. Your father is indeed able to endure hardships sometimes. It's just that he will not take the initiative to seek hardship. For example, if you invite him to go to Eozambiulle with you because he loves you, he will definitely agree immediately."

Hazel nodded: "I don't want my father to suffer. So I will go with Uncle Mike and the others. You should rest at home and play with my dad all the time. You must be very tired!"

"You said it wrong. This period is the happiest time for me and your dad. We haven't been this happy for a long time. How can we be tired? Your Uncle Mike wants to take you out to play, so I can't go with your dad. Your dad and you, Uncle Mike... It's okay for them to eat at the same table, but I can't imagine them traveling together."

Elliot sighed: "Honey, I'm not that fierce; I'm easy-going, and I'm good with everyone."

Avery glanced at him and gave him confidence: "My daughter won't dislike you."

"I haven't had a fight with Mike for a long time." Elliot argued.

When His Eyes Opened Chapter 2655

Chapter 2655

“That’s because the two of you didn’t see each other much later.”

Seeing her parents quarrelling, Hazel said in a timely manner: “Dad, I think you are very good. If you cannot suffer, don’t suffer. That’s right! Everyone has people they like and people they don’t like. Like Uncle Mike and not like you.”

“I don’t dislike Mike. If I really don’t like him, how can I let him get so close to you? Many years ago, he was very close to your mother, so I didn’t like him for a while, and then I didn’t quarrel with him.” Elliot explained to Hazel.

“Dad, I like you even if you don’t explain.” Hazel blocked Elliot’s words.

Elliot blushed instantly, feeling a little embarrassed.

Hazel’s straightforward expression caught Elliot off guard, and he was secretly delighted.

“Let me just say it; Hazel won’t dislike you. Who doesn’t have any problems?” Avery folded the clothes Hazel was going to bring when she went out and put them in the suitcase, and began to laugh at herself and say, “I have a lot of problems too! Now I can’t bear hardships either; who would want to endure hardships when I have a comfortable life! Although I don’t particularly hate anyone, I’m too lazy to socialize with people now.

“Mom and Dad, you are both very good.” Hazel concluded, “Although I have not been back with you for a long time, I can feel that you are very good people. “I aspire to be like great people like you in the future.”

“Hazel, you will be stronger than us.” Avery was full of expectations for Hazel: “You can survive such a difficult environment, and your resilience and tenacity will accompany you and make you a success.”

in the evening.

Layla got off work and went to a nearby supermarket to buy groceries.

Today was the first day she moved out.

She especially wanted to make dinner for herself.

She used to have servants cook three meals a day when she was at home. Even if she occasionally had the idea of cooking by herself, she would give up quickly in the end.

Now that she lived by herself, she could do whatever she wanted without worrying about being laughed at.

She planned to eat hot pot at night.

Because hot pot was the easiest.

She bought some ingredients, and then bought a bag of hot pot base, cooked it, and ate it, and the taste was not much worse.

She bought some randomly according to the ingredients on the recipe, and then went to choose the hot pot base.

The bodyguard reminded: "Miss, you still have to buy some oil, salt, sauce, vinegar, bowls, and chopsticks."

"I bought the bowls and chopsticks. You reminded me that I need to buy some oil, salt, sauce, and vinegar. Do I need to buy some green onions and condiments?" Layla walked towards the condition area.

Bodyguard: "See if you want to eat green onions."

Layla: "I'll eat it!"

"Did you buy the kitchen knife?"

"I have a fruit knife." Layla had only bought fruit knives before.

"Then you have to buy a kitchen knife."

....

Originally, Layla just planned to go to the supermarket to buy some ingredients and go back to cooking, but she ended up buying a lot of kitchen supplies. Fortunately, there were bodyguards to help her carry them back.

After the bodyguard delivered her things home, he rolled up his sleeves and said, "Miss, how about I cook dinner for you before leaving?"

Layla: "No, I have the recipe. You get off work!"

After the bodyguard left, Layla started to prepare her own dinner in the kitchen.

An hour later, a delicious hot pot meal was cooked.

She had to say that the appearance of the hot pot was similar to that made by restaurants outside, with a tangy aroma that made people salivate.

Layla first took a picture and sent it to the family group to show off, and then she sat down to eat.