

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2606

Chapter 2606

Seeing how Cameron was suddenly so helpful, Waylon raised his brows.

“What’s going on with you today?”

Cameron moved the soup in front of him. “It’s just dinner. Nothing is going on?”

He smiled and tasted the soup. “A little salty.”

“Salty?” Cameron got up. “I’ll redo it.”

Waylon grabbed her hand and looked at her. “I’m just joking. Taste it. It’s not salty.”

Cameron didn’t speak.

Waylon pulled her onto his thighs and touched her cheek. “There’s no need to force yourself to do what you’re not good at. My wife doesn’t need to be a good cook.”

Cameron hugged him and buried her face in his neck.

Waylon paused and touched her hair. “What’s wrong?”

She said in a low voice, “You’re the one who found the store, right? Liar.”

Waylon was silent. He didn’t admit it but didn’t deny it either. After a long pause, he spoke. “I didn’t really help.”

Cameron got up and looked at him. “Then why didn’t you admit to it? You lied.”

“_”

Cameron cupped his face.

“Wayne, you’re being silly? Even if you are the one who found the store, I won’t scold you.”

Waylon smiled. “You found out.”

Cameron said, "I never told you where it was located, and I don't believe that you drove past. It's not on the way home or to your office. You only drove past after taking a huge detour. Do you think I'm dumb?"

He smiled.

"That's true. How could a person who pretended to be a man be stupid?"

Cameron hugged him by the neck, leaned in, and smiled.

"So, stupid Wayne, you mustn't be the one teaching my son."

Waylon paused and stared at her. "Son?"

"Well, someone keeps talking about having a child. Have you forgotten? Well, ignore me then."

She was going to get up, but Waylon pulled her back in and said in a husky voice, "Are you sure?"

Cameron went close to his ear. "I did some calculations, and I'm currently fertile."

Waylon kissed her and chuckled. "Should have said that earlier."

He then picked her up and went upstairs.

After a few days, a woman went to the martial arts center and saw that it had been demolished. She was shocked when a person in overalls walked out.

The woman stopped him. "Is the center closed for good?"

The man guided

her. "It moved to that corner. Walk straight for about 600 feet, and you'll see it across the subway."

"Thanks." She walked in the direction the man pointed.

She got to the subway station and noticed that the center was across a busy street.

The woman stood outside before slowly opening the door and taking a peek.

"Can I help you?"

She jumped when a student there suddenly popped up. She smiled and said, "I'm here to see Cameron Southern."

"Oh, wait here. I'll go get her."

The man invited her in and yelled up the stairs.

The woman waited in front of the ring while looking around curiously.

Cameron walked down the stairs, spotted the woman waiting for her, and smiled. "Mahina!"

Mahina looked back at her and smiled. "Cam."

Cameron held her shoulder and took a good look at her. "How did you find this place? Why are you here? Where's my father?"

Mahina smiled. "He asked me to come to find you. Don't worry. He's been spending time drinking tea and watching movies with Damian."

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2607

Chapter 2607

Cameron was glad to hear that her father was fine. She put her hands around Mahina and guided her to the guest area. "Why didn't you give me a call so I could come to get you?"

"That's too much hassle. You told me the address, so I just came here, but I didn't know that you had moved. I'm glad it wasn't far away."

While walking to the rest area, they bumped into Dylan, who was walking over with a few students. When one of them saw Cameron bringing a girl to the rest area, they were surprised. "Cam, who's this?"

"Oh, it's my best friend from the East Islands, Mahina. We grew up together, and she's pretty much half a Southern."

Mahina nodded at them politely. "Hello."

Mahina looked quiet and gentle. She was beautiful and friendly too.

The few men blushed and were very friendly too. "Hello, Mahina."

"Alright, I'll be spending time with her. Run along." Cameron waved her hand and continued toward the rest area.

The few men started whispering to each other.

"I thought women from the East Islands were all unruly like Cam. I didn't know there are some that are so quiet?"

"I think the East Islands aren't as scary as we imagined. I could tell that the girl must have a great personality."

After they walked away, they noticed that someone was missing, so they turned around and saw Dylan standing there as if he had lost his soul.

They walked back to him. "Dy?"

He snapped back to reality. "Hmm? Oh, girls from the East Islands, huh?"

He quickly left after saying that.

The few men looked at each other. What was wrong with him?

Cameron showed Mahina the first and second floors while the men hid behind a wall and observed.

"Do you think that Cam will ask her to stay?"

"I hope so. If there's a woman like her here, I'm pretty sure I'll put in more effort every day."

"We really should have a few more female students. If it's just us men, I'm not motivated."

The group looked at the people behind them who spoke. "Cam is a woman too and is also beautiful, but why aren't you motivated?"

They sounded sad. “So what if she’s beautiful? Have you seen a pretty woman who can fight ten strong men? Conroy and Howard have both been defeated. I see her more like the leader.”

Dylan suddenly blocked them and crossed his arms. “What are you looking at?”

The few men looked up and stood up straight. “Nothing.”

Cameron and Mahina walked over and saw them congregating there. “Oh, why are you here?”

The group looked away.

Cameron asked Mahina, “Are you thirsty? Want a drink?”

Mahina said, “Anything works.”

Cameron patted her shoulder. “I’ll make you coffee then.”

She was going to walk away when the men surrounded them. “Cam, we can make the coffee.”

“Yes, we can do it. You don’t need to do that.”

Cameron was suspicious. Had they always been so helpful?

Dylan cleared his throat and looked serious. “Do you have nothing better to do? I should be the one making coffee.” He left after that.

Cameron took a deep breath and looked even more shocked than them. “What’s wrong with Dylan today?”

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2608

Chapter 2608

Leah and two of her friends were shopping in the mall, and they were looking at luxury goods.

When they walked into a shop for luxury clothes, she saw Zephir, and one of the friends asked, “Oh, isn’t that Mr. Gosling? Why is she in a store for ladies?”

Leah walked over. “Why are you here?”

Zephir paused, looked at her, but didn’t reply. The woman in the dressing room walked out. “Zeph, does this look good?”

Leah was surprised when she saw the woman. She looked very similar to Daisy in height and looks.

Leah’s heart was pierced, but she didn’t show it. “This is…”

Zephir didn’t reply, but the woman grabbed his arm and smiled. “I’m his girlfriend. My name is Roxy Van Damme.”

Daisy, Roxy, and Zeph.

Leah understood something and laughed at herself. He was always trying to find Daisy’s replacement.

Zephir took the clothes from her. “Let’s ring this up.”

Roxy smiled. “Sure.”

He hugged her shoulders and walked past Leah.

After they paid and were about to leave, Leah ran after them. “Zephir!”

He stopped but didn’t turn back.

Leah walked over to him. “Are you serious about this?”

Zephir frowned. “What?”

“Why are you doing this? You can’t have Daisy, so you found a replacement instead?”

“Leah!” Zephir looked angry. “This is none of your business. Do you think you can control me because I’m your friend?”

Leah balled up her fist and smiled. “I’m controlling you? I just don’t want to see you like this. This isn’t you.”

Zephir smirked. “You think you know me, but do you know the real me?”

She didn’t speak.

“Leah, don’t try to mind my business from now on. Roxy is my girlfriend, so I hope that you can respect her.”

Zephir walked away with Roxy without looking back.

Roxy turned to look at Leah because her instincts told her that this woman must be in love with Zephir.

Leah froze on the spot and bit her lips as her eyes turned red.

The two friends rushed over. “Leah, are you alright?”

She looked down and shook her head. “I’m fine.”

“Leah, we know you have feelings for Zephir, but there are plenty of fish in the sea, There’s no need to be sad for him.”

“Yes, if he doesn’t even look at you, why do you still wait?”

“I know...” Leah bit on her lip so hard she was going to break them, but her tears still rolled down her cheeks. “But you don’t know how much I like him. It’s been ten years, even when he doesn’t feel the same way.”

It had always been unrequited. She had been under the impression that after Daisie was married, he would give up on her and would look at her, but it was all too much to ask.

Her friends wiped her tears away. “Alright, cheer up. It’s just ten years. Some people got married and divorced during that time. There’s nothing to be sad about that.”

“Yes. If you’re upset, we’ll drink with you tonight. We’ll be here for you.”

That night, in a dimly lit bar...

The three women drank at the bar while music played.
“Cheers. Let’s forget the sadness.”

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2609

Chapter 2609

Leah drank her entire glass in one go and poured another.

The two friends wanted to dance and tried to bring her along, but she waved. “No, you go ahead.”

“Wait for us here then.” They walked to the dance floor.

Leah drank all the beer on the bar top and ordered more beer, and continued drinking to numb herself. However, no matter how much she drank, her mind still went to Zephir.

Her heart ached terribly.

Leah stumbled toward the ladies’ room and started throwing up when she got to the toilet. She then started crying.

She stayed there for a while before leaving with her makeup smudged. She stumbled her way back to her seat when two drunk men bumped into her, and she fell to the floor.

Her head was spinning so violently she couldn't get up.

The two men looked at her, realized she was a drunk woman, and started scheming.

They helped her up and were going to bring her away when she started fighting back. "I don't want to leave with you. I don't know you. Get your hands off me!"

The server who walked past saw them. One of the men smiled and said, "I'm sorry, my friend had too many."

Leah was dragged away by the men. She stomped her feet in protest, but her heels flew off.

The two men didn't pick them up for her and continued dragging her toward the elevator.

At that moment, someone in a coat who looked handsome walked over and picked up her heels. "Wait."

The two men froze, then turned around.

The man in the coat waved the heels around. "Aren't you going to pick them up?"

They looked at each other and realized that one of them should go get..em.

One of the men walked over, but the man put the shoes behind him. "I don't think he's your girlfriend. Are you trying to bring her home because she's drunk?"

"What are you saying?"

The men didn't look happy.

The man in the coat chuckled. "She's wearing designer clothes, and the heels I'm holding cost thousands. I'm guessing she's from a wealthy fa mily. I don't think girls from wealthy families would be interested in men like you."

The man immediately looked upset and tried to grab the shoes, but the other man grabbed his wrist and twisted it. The man yelled out in pain and sobered up.

The other man who was holding Leah could tell that this man wasn't someone they could mess with, so he pushed her away and ran. Leah fell to the floor.

The man whose wrist was twisted scuttled away too.

Morrison Shaw walked toward Leah, bent down, and put her shoes back on. "Are you awake, lady?"

Leah looked up, and her head was still spinning. Her eyes were blurry, so she couldn't see his face clearly.

He helped her up, but Leah suddenly cried, "I want to go home."

Morrison clicked his tongue. "Such a hassle. Where do you live?"

Leah paused. "I forgot."

Morrison slapped his forehead. "How much did this woman drink?"

"No, why do I have to take care of her? I can just hand her over to the servers, and I will be free."

"But what the heck? I should finish what I started."

Morrison walked out of the bar with Leah, who stood there while he went to get his car.

He was planning to send this drunkard to the police station so that they could send her home.