Chapter 2754

Avery patted Layla on the shoulder: "Let's go out!"

Layla stood where she was, as if enchanted by someone, and could not hear Avery's words at all.

Avery held her hand and took her out of the intensive care unit.

After coming out of the intensive care unit, Avery immediately helped Layla take off the protective clothing.

"Layla, don't cry. He will get better." Avery comforted, "This situation is only temporary now. After the operation is performed on him, he will be able to get out of the machine."

Layla sobbed as she hugged Avery: "Mom, you must save him...I have so many things to tell him."

"Mom knows." Avery patted Layla's back lightly with the palm of her hand, "Now he is the savior of our family. Mom and Dad are very grateful to him, and we are all trying to find a donor... As long as we find a suitable donor, he will have hope."

"Mom, what can we do as soon as possible? Find a donor?" Layla was desperate to help. No matter what the price.

"Layla, mom knows you're in a hurry, and mom is in a hurry. But this kind of thing doesn't just cost money to find immediately. We've scoured the globe to find donors. Be patient and wait. Your dad and I don't care about the cost, the hospital is matching every day, as long as there is a suitable one, I will tell you as soon as possible."

Avery's words made Layla calm down a little.

"Mom, can he feel pain now?" Layla asked, wiping away her tears.

Avery: "He's unconscious now. You can take it as if he doesn't feel pain."

"Is it dangerous if he stays unconscious?" Layla worried that Eric would be in pain if he became conscious, and worried that he wouldn't wake up if he remained unconscious.

Avery: "It will be fine after the operation. Layla, you should go back to Aryadelle first! The situation here is currently under control. You stay here, besides worrying, you are still worried. Mom will stay here and wait for his recovered from the operation."

Layla: "Mom, thank you for your hard work."

Avery: "Compared to his taking care of you, mom is nothing. After you return to Aryadelle, go and see his parents. They called and wanted to come here, but I asked them to come here after the operation."

Layla: "Yes. I just want to apologize to them when I go back to Aryadelle."

Avery raised her hand to wipe away the tears from the corners of Layla's eyes: "Don't blame yourself too much. If you could save him, I believe you will save him too. Love is mutual."

Aryadelle.

After entering the winter, Hazel lived in the house outside the university much more frequently.

One reason was the weather, and the other was that she needed to make up for the lessons she had missed during her previous absence.

When get out of class was over, a female classmate approached Hazel.

"Hazel, your home is outside the university? No wonder you don't live on campus!"

Hazel glanced at the female classmate in front of her.

They were in the same major, but not in the same class.

Hazel's attitude towards female classmates was much friendlier than that of male classmates who stroke up a conversation.

"How do you know?" Hazel put the books into the schoolbag, and then put the schoolbag on her back.

The female classmate walked out of the classroom with her.

"It's a bit of a coincidence...the tutor you found recently is my aunt." The girl smiled kindly at Hazel, "My aunt came to my house for dinner yesterday and was a little late. She said there was a student in our school Looking for her to make up lessons, I was curious who worked so hard, so I asked a lot. She refused to tell me your name, saying that this matter cannot be said to the outside world. I overheard it when my uncle asked her secretly."

Hazel smiled awkwardly: "I asked for leave before, and I couldn't keep up with some courses, so I asked the teacher to find your aunt. The teacher said that your aunt is specialized in training in this area."

Chapter 2755

"My aunt used to be the host of the TV station. Later, she resigned after suffering a serious illness. Not all students are accepted for training now. In fact, I was also influenced by my aunt when I learned broadcasting and hosting. I grew up I especially admire her." The female classmate said.

"I learned this major because I adore a host." Hazel answered.

"Oh? Which host do you like best?" asked the female classmate.

Hazel didn't know how to answer. Because the host she admired was from Thopiavelle.

The TV she watched before was from Thopiavelle, and all the sources of information she came into contact with came from Thopiavelle.

She was not very familiar with the host of Aryadelle.

"I don't know her name." Hazel lied casually and brought the subject aside.

"Hazel, I think you don't participate in school activities. Is it because you don't want to participate or your family members don't let you? The neighborhood next to our university is not cheap. Your family is quite rich!"

Hazel: "No. It doesn't matter if I make friends. It's because I don't really like to participate in group activities. If there are activities with credits, I will definitely participate."

"Hahahaha! It's really funny what you said. They all said that you look down on your classmates because of your beauty. My aunt said that you are not such a person. My aunt said that you not only take your studies very seriously, but also treat people very politely. Absolutely you're not that kind of person." The female classmate boasted.

Hazel blushed a little, not knowing how to answer.

Because she didn't want any of her classmates to know her family situation. As long as one person knew, countless people would know.

"Hazel, don't worry, I won't tell other students that you asked my aunt to make up lessons. Also, your family lives outside the University, so I won't tell others."

Hazel: "Thank you! I just want to study hard and don't want to spend too much energy on other aspects."

The classmate: "I'm so proud of you. You are not only gorgeous, but you also put in a lot of effort. I feel a little self-conscious."

Hazel: "Don't say that. I don't have a good background, so I need to work hard to catch up with everyone."

The classmate: "You are so humble!"

Hazel couldn't tell this female classmate that she got into this University through connections, so she could only continue to find topics to talk about. : "What else did your aunt say?"

The female classmate frowned slightly, and after thinking carefully, she shook her head: "My aunt refuses to tell me too much about you. She said she couldn't. But I listened that she told my mother that your tuition fee is very high. So I guess your family is rich. Even if my aunt doesn't say this, I know your family is rich. Because my aunt's tuition fee has always been higher than that of ordinary training teachers. If you can afford my aunt, then your family is not poor."

Hazel nodded: "I feel that most of the students around me should not be poor, right?"

"It's very bad. I know that people from poorer families will choose majors that are easier to find employment. For example, girls will study medical care and accounting, and boys will study computers."

Hazel felt that she said very sincerely, and gradually let go of her guard.

"I'm going to eat in the cafeteria, are you going?" Hazel asked.

"I'm going to the cafeteria too. Let's eat together!"

Hazel: "Okay."

After the two arrived at the cafeteria, Hazel's cell phone vibrated. She immediately took the phone out of her bag. Seeing that it was Robert's calling, she immediately stepped aside and answered the phone.

"Little sister, I checked your schedule. You don't have class tonight, right? Dad and sister are back, and I'll pick you up from your University." Robert said.
