Chapter 1596

"Miss Jung, farewell!"

"Master Remy, please be careful on your way out."

After she sent Remy off, Marlee was still a little confused.

As she stood on the roof of the merchant ship, she thought carefully about what Remy did and said after entering the door

She seemed to gradually realize the context.

"Had Remy taken a fancy to me?"

Marlee thought, her eyes widening.

"It's very possible!"

'Otherwise, what was he doing here?"

"He kept asking about my family situation just to find out if I have a husband

'Plus, he held nothing back when answering my questions about the Central Sacred Continent

"However, his plan was disrupted when Peggy came in and called me Mom.

"No wonder Remy had been in such a low mood since Peggy left.

"After learning that Peggy is her daughter, he bade farewell and left.

"A big shot would be able to find any woman he wants, so he wouldn't be interested in a woman who has given birth to a child."

It occurred to Marlee suddenly.

"So Does David also

"Pah! What was I thinking?"

"David is a direct descendant of a powerful force and he has become an Eternal at such a young age, so that means he is qualified to compete for the position of their heir

“His status is countless times higher than Remy’s and he lives in a different world than me.

“What’s more, I have given birth.

“David’s marriage in the future will definitely be arranged by the forces behind him.

The one he marries will definitely be the chosen one from Star Kingdom.”

Marlee shook her head vigorously, dismissed the unrealistic thoughts in her mind, and turned to enter the merchant ship.

Next, the merchant ship began to move forward a little bit.

Remy never came to see Marlee again.

Soon, it was their turn.

After handing over the token engraved with 782 to another staff member, the merchant ship entered the wormhole.

The starry sky disappeared and their surroundings became pitch black.

At this time, the merchant ship had entered six-dimensional space.

The pressure here was far greater than the four-dimensional space that David once entered.

All means of transportation entering this space could only travel through certain pre-constructed passages.

Once they left the passage, they would instantly become powder.

Even people were no exception.

Only an Eternal like David might be able to resist it for a while.

However, he would only live slightly longer

Eternal could not tear apart the six-dimensional space, so it would just be a dead end for them.

Of course, it was impossible to get out of this channel.

The merchant ship where Marlee was located began to move forward uncontrollably

The edge of the Central Sacred Continent was on the other end of the wormhole.

David walked to the roof of the merchant ship at this time.

As he looked at the pitch-black surroundings, he released his mind power and started exploring around

It did not take long for David to discover that there were very solid objects blocking him in every direction. This was a long passage, and they could only go forward or backward.

Going up, down, left, and right was forbidden.

David also tried it with his mind power

However, it did not work.

He felt that even if he used all his strength to attack, it would be impossible to break through in even the slightest.

“Is this a wormhole?”

“Sure enough, it is very strong.

“It should be built by Saints.

It is impossible for others to have the strength to build such a solid passage in a high-dimensional space!”

Chapter 1597

On a pier on the edge of the Central Sacred Continent, countless ships, large and small, crowded around densely.

There was no end in sight.

According to visual estimates, there were at least hundreds of thousands of ships.

Although there were many ships, it did not appear chaotic.

They were all in line and arranged in a very orderly manner.

Many staff members were also directing the ships.

More than 90% of these ships were merchant ships that transported goods.

Some just got here and they were ready to sell their cargo on the Central Sacred Continent.

On the other hand, some were preparing to set off from here to other places in Star Kingdom.

The Central Sacred Continent had many piers like this.

This was just one of them.

The entire Central Sacred Continent accounted for 80% of Star Kingdom's trading volume, so it was no joke.

The volume of ships coming and going every day was scary.

It could be said that there was no place in Star Kingdom more prosperous than the Central Sacred Continent.

This was the place where every inch of land was like gold, making it the Star Kingdom's famous money-squandering paradise.

Almost all the forces that held even the slightest prestige would establish their industries on the Central Sacred Continent.

David had undoubtedly made the optimum decision to spend his money here.

If he spent tens of billions of Star Dollars in other places, he would certainly attract attention, but not here.

The only thing he needed to pay attention to was that he could not spend too much at once when he did not have enough strength. Instead, he needed to accumulate his strength slowly.

David started from the bottom while he was on Earth and got here step by step.

Hence, he knew to make money without making any noise.

Everything should be low-key, and it would be best if he could spend a lot of money and get a lot of lavish points without attracting others' attention.

Even if he could not, he had to first ensure that he could improve his strength as much as possible to deal with some emergencies.

At this time, the merchant ship where Marlee was located had just exited the wormhole and was queuing up to enter the Central Sacred Continent.

Their merchant ship looked petite and inconspicuous here.

Any merchant ship around them was ten times or even dozens of times bigger than them.

However, they were lucky not to be discriminated against along the way.

There was no communication between the merchant ships at all.

Everyone had a job to do, and their defense was constantly activated.

No one would be allowed inside the cabin except for the staff of the Central Sacred Continent to avoid unnecessary trouble.

Soon, Marlee's merchant ship got into the Central Sacred Continent.

As soon as they entered the continent, the ships scattered and headed for their own destinations.

After checking the map, Marlee directed the merchant ship to move in one direction.

Originally, it was also her first time in the Central Sacred Continent so she should not be so familiar.

However, Marlee learned the names and headquarters locations of some of the largest trading companies in the Central Sacred Continent from Remy before entering the wormhole.

These large trading companies were relatively fair and just.

They would not cheat Marlee and others just because they were from a small place.

On the contrary, it would not be the same when it came to small trading companies. Some of them intentionally tried to scam merchants visiting from small places for the first time.

I'm A Quadrillionaire Chapter 1598

Chapter 1598

Marlee felt that Remy would not lie to her, nor was there any need for him to lie to her.

Therefore, she chose a large trading company named Treasure Trove.

There was no particular reason for choosing it. Marlee chose it as its name sounded pleasant to the ears.

The result would be the same anyway.

After determining the direction, Marlee made the merchant ship head towards the headquarters of Treasure Trove.

However, before they could go far, a small spaceship blocked their way.

Marlee looked at the small spaceship ahead with a puzzled expression.

'We're already in the Central Sacred Continent and they still dare to hijack our ship?

'I didn't think they would be so bold!

'There are still many merchant ships passing by, so why did they block us?'

The other merchant ships that passed by were ignoring this as well.

Since it was none of their business, they would not stick their noses into this.

However, no matter what, Marlee refused to believe that there were people on the Central Sacred Continent who dared to rob them so blatantly.

If so, who would dare to trade on the Central Sacred Continent in the future?

Wouldn't this be destroying their own brand?

Marlee was just about to ask the other party's purpose when she heard a voice from the small spaceship.

"I wonder if this is your first time coming to the Central Sacred Continent? I am a know-it-all in this area. I have lived here since I was a child, and I know this place better than anyone else. If you need anything, you can ask me. I will recommend the most suitable company for you no matter if you want to sell or buy. If you want to sell, I will definitely give you the highest price, and if you want to buy, I will guarantee that you won't spend any extra money. However, I will need some tips for my hard work."

It sounded like a young man.

He was speaking very humbly, so Marlee and the others breathed a sigh of relief.

'He's just here to solicit. I thought he was trying to rob us!'

Although everyone figured the probability of this was basically zero, it was still the first time they came to the Central Sacred Continent, so their understanding of this place was quite limited.

"Sorry! It's not the first time we've come to the Central Sacred Continent, so we don't need your help. Thank you for your kindness!" Marlee said politely.

They were newcomers and the other party was local.

Therefore, Marlee did not dare to offend him in the slightest.

"Ma'am, don't lie to me. I, Willie Hardigan, have been here for so many years. I haven't learned anything apart from how to read people. When you just entered the Central Sacred Continent, you paused for a moment, so you must be looking at the map, right? If it's not your first time, I'm sure you'll be going straight to your destination, so why bother looking at the map, am I right?" The young man's voice came from the spaceship again.

"Although this is our first time, we already have a goal, so we don't need your guidance. You should go to other merchant ships to see if they have any needs. Thank you," Marlee said again.

"Ma'am, the price of goods could change at any time. Sometimes, the same goods will have a huge difference in price just a day apart. What you know may not be first-hand information, but I have the latest information on this trade area. If you hire me, you will definitely not suffer any losses

Marlee was annoyed at the other party's pestering.

However, this was the first time she came to the Central Sacred Continent, so she did not want to offend the locals.

After all, these guys had lived here for so long and they would have many connections.

Marlee would not get any benefits if she offended them.

She decided to hire the young man if the asking price was not high.

The less trouble, the better.

She would just think of this as spending money to avoid disaster.

So, Marlee asked, "In that case, how much is your fee, Mr. Hardigan?"

"Ma'am, you're so wise! Soon you will know how cost-effective this decision is. I want to know whether you're selling or buying," Willie asked happily.

"We're selling!"

"If you're selling, my fee is very low. It is just one percent of the value of the goods you sell."

I'm A Quadrillionaire Chapter 1599

Chapter 1599

"What?"

Upon hearing this, Marlee felt a surge of anger rushing straight to the top of her head.

The other party was demanding such an exorbitant price. He was asking for one percent of the value of all the goods on her ship.

One must know that this was the rare ore prepared by the Jung family with all their efforts.

This was already the Jung family's last hope.

Even if Marlee sold these goods to big trading companies that would collect them from Green Apollo, they would be worth 200 to 300 million Star Dollars.

Now, they had risked their lives to transport the goods to the Central Sacred Continent.

Although they had no idea what the price was here, it would be at least several times more.

Otherwise, why would those big trading companies go so far as to acquire the goods from Green Apollo?

It was these huge profit margins that made them willing to make the trip.

All the ores on board were worth at least one billion Star Dollars.

With just a few words, this guy wanted to get one percent, that was, more than ten million Star Dollars?

By the way, the goods might worth even be more than this figure.

How was it possible?

This was daylight robbery.

The Jung family hired more than a dozen Infinity Rankers to risk their lives to protect them all the way here, and they were only paid 8% of the total value.

The dozens of Infinity Rankers would only earn that amount after spending more than a year risking their lives.

If they got into an accident halfway through the journey, they would even lose their lives.

Hence, they would not let this punk take away one percent with just a few words.

Marlee was the decision maker sent by the Jung family this time.

Therefore, she certainly would not agree.

Suppressing the anger in her heart, Marlee said coldly, "Sorry! Mr. Hardigan, we can't afford you, so you should find another merchant ship!"

"Ma'am, you have just agreed. Our employment relationship has been established, and you cannot go back on your word now," Willie said with a grin.

"I just asked about your price. When did I agree? Now I think your price is too high and I don't want to hire you," Marlee snapped

"If you ask me the price, it means you agree to hire me. Don't worry, Ma'am, I won't take the benefits for nothing. I will definitely find you the highest price to sell your goods. You can tell me what you're selling now so I can find the best place to sell it for you."

"I never promised to hire you, and I won't hire you. Please get out of the way. I can find another place to sell them myself. I don't need your guidance."

"Ma'am, you're violating our employment relationship. In the Central Sacred Continent, you have to pay. liquidated damages. I will leave if you pay me the liquidated damages."

“Breach of our employment relationship? Do you have any evidence? Just because you said I hired you? You are so demanding. Is there any law in the Central Sacred Continent for this? You are insulting the Central Sacred Continent by doing this! I can sue you!” Marlee snapped.

She did not believe that the Central Sacred Continent, the most prosperous place in Star Kingdom, would let these guys do whatever they wanted.

This jerk must think she was a newcomer and so wanted to blackmail her with his status as a local.

If it was three to five million Star Dollars, Marlee would agree to hire him.

She would consider it as losing some money to avoid disaster.

However, asking for 1% of the profit immediately was daylight robbery as that was worth more than 10. million Star Dollars.

There was no way Marlee would agree to such an unreasonable request.

“Ma’am, are you sure you don’t want to hire me? This is the Central Sacred Continent, not your hometown. You have to think about it carefully. Make sure you won’t regret your decision,” Willie also said gloomily.

“I thought about the situation, and again, I never hired you and I never will.”

After Marlee finished speaking she did not give Willie another chance to speak.

She said directly to the person operating the merchant ship, “Go pass the guy in front of us and move on.”

“Yes, Miss!”

They were also fuming.

The other party directly asking for 1% of the total value was too much.

Everyone on board had experienced a life-and-death struggle.

Even after all that, they would not even get so much.

The merchant ship bypassed the small spaceship in front and continued to move toward Treasure Trove.

I’m A Quadrillionaire Chapter 1600

Chapter 1600

On the small spaceship, a young man with a somewhat fat face looked at the departing merchant ship with a gloomy face. He was furious on the inside, but he could not do anything.

They had to sign the employment relationship agreement for his rights to be protected.

Naturally, an employment relationship would not be established just because the other party asked about the price.

However, Willie did not expect this woman to dare to disrespect him as a local the first time she came to the Central Sacred Continent.

In the past, Willie took advantage of such people who were coming here for the first time from a small place. He knew they would have the mentality of not daring to make a huge fuss out of this.

Therefore, he had succeeded many times before.

Not only did he get huge rewards, but he also led them to sell the goods at low prices to some small trading companies to enjoy more rebates.

However, this time, he encountered a challenge.

Willie thought for a moment.

Originally, the other party agreed to hire him.

However, when they heard that he quoted a 1% reward, they immediately changed their mind.

Obviously, this 1% remuneration was considered very high by the other party, so they immediately refused without hesitation. Furthermore, there was no room for bargaining.

It could be inferred that the value of the goods on this merchant ship must be very high. This was most likely why the other party did not even leave room for negotiation.

Willie was dissatisfied after watching his profit slipping away from him.

However, he also had no reason to chase after them.

If the patrol saw him pestering the passing merchant ship, it would be troublesome.

He might even get arrested and put behind bars for a few days to experience inhuman torture.

Willie did not want to go through that.

'What should I do?'

Willie thought about it.

Suddenly his eyes light up.

"Right, since I can't continue pestering them, I can pass the news to the small trading companies that often cooperate with me.

'I'll ask them to send someone to buy the goods at a low price.

'At that time, i can also get a rebate.

'That will do!'

After making the decision, Willie contacted Lou Sirr, the boss of a small trading company with whom he often worked together.

This guy was also a savage.

He would go wherever his interest went.

Willie told Lou exactly what happened along with some of his predictions.

He felt that the value of the goods on this merchant ship was definitely not low.

It was the first time the other party came to the Central Sacred Continent, so there was a lot of room for manipulation.

When Lou heard this, he immediately became interested.

He told Willie to follow behind the ship first, and he would send someone right away.

The two hit it off immediately.

Willie immediately steered the small spaceship to follow the merchant ship from at a distance.

He did not go up to her either.

He would look at the ship and determine the position of the other party, so as not to lose them.

In the merchant ship.

“Miss, that guy has been following us, what should we do?”

Marlee frowned and said, “Don’t worry about him. Just keep going. I don’t believe that the Central Sacred Continent has no laws.”

“Yes, Miss!”

The merchant ship continues to move forward.

The small spaceship Willie drove followed far behind.
