

Regan gritted her teeth.

She didn't want to believe that Harvey actually had the Longmen Law Enforcement Badge.

“You actually think this is fake?”

Harvey smiled calmly as he flicked his teacup to the badge.

The badge then slid right toward Regan with a dazzling glare.

“I suggest you take a close look, young lady.”

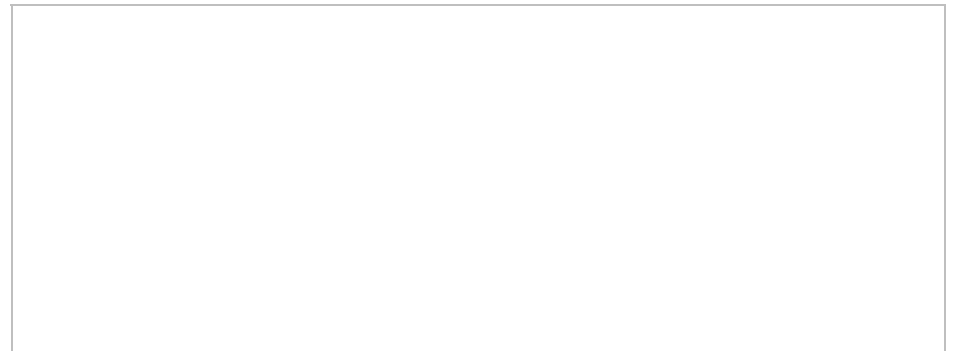

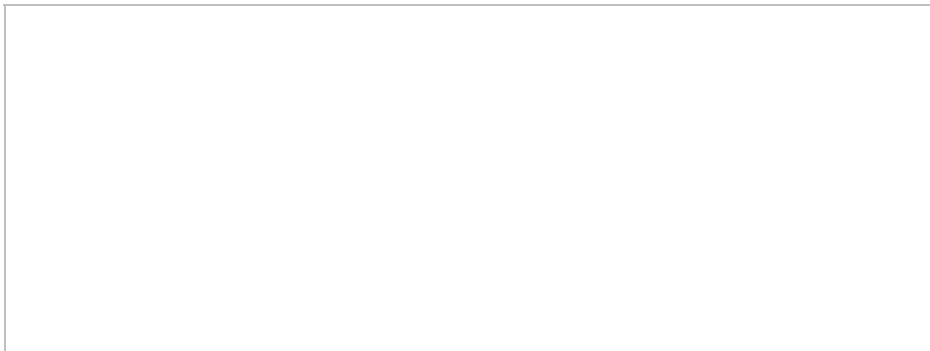

“Don't misunderstand me.”

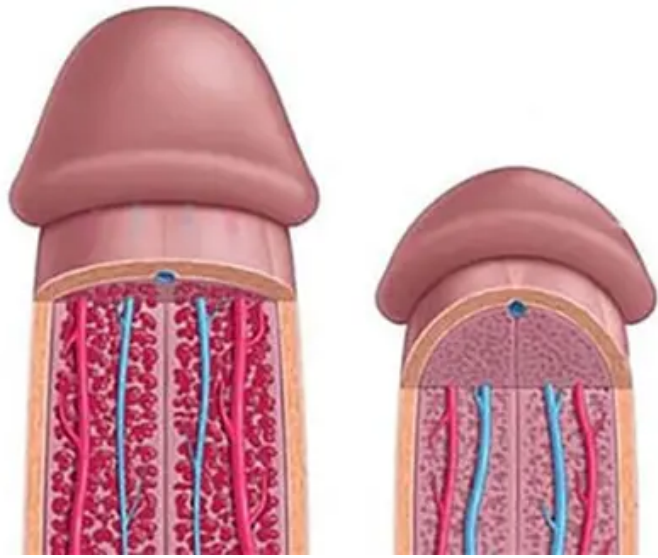

Regan shot him a stern look and then glanced over. Her mind exploded the instant she saw a few hidden marks to authenticate the badge. She immediately knelt, slamming her knees to the ground.

She couldn't remain calm any longer. The badge was undoubtedly real!

Even a dominant woman like Regan couldn't help but shiver. 1

She didn't know who Harvey actually was, but the badge was enough to prove his powerful status; Harvey was not someone Regan could afford to go against.

If she didn't kneel, she wouldn't be the only one in trouble-the entire Longmen Warband would be dragged down as well.

"I'm sorry, Sir York. This is all just a misunderstanding..."

"Please give us a chance to redeem ourselves!"

Not just Regan, even the other disciples were groveling on the ground. Their faces had completely lost all color.

Harvey narrowed his eyes at them for a moment.

"This was your first mistake-you came with good intentions..."

"You were clearly being used because of the situation."

"I've decided to punish you by making you keep an eye on the young talents in the backyard for a day. You can leave after that."

"Ah!"

The disciples froze. They soon came to their senses.

Though Harvey said that he was punishing them, he was actually giving them time to stay with their junior

He was repaying them with kindness.

The disciples looked at Harvey with odd expressions.

‘Did a man like this really conspire with the enemy for the sake of his own glory?’

Harvey didn’t take another glance at Regan as he stood up.

“Layne. Give Vice Branch Leader Benett a call.”

“Tell him that I’ll fight the Indians tomorrow.”

“Regardless of the higher-ups’ decision, I’ll go!”

“Ah!”

Regan and the others were completely shocked.

“He’s planning to crush the Indians and turn the tides?”

“He’s only thinking of taking action instead of lashing out at the comments online! This is a true man!”

At six o’clock in the evening, inside the meeting room of Longmen’s Budokan.

“Harvey! You’re here!”

Fisher and Damian welcomed Harvey in with open arms.

Rhea and Bryce didn't speak up, they only greeted Harvey with a nod.

Harvey glanced at the people around him and said, "Vice Branch Leader Benett, Elder Steele. I told people to send word that I'll be fighting tomorrow."

"Do you not agree with me?"

"Are you planning to lose the fight completely?"

Fisher's eyes twitched, as if he could feel the rage in Harvey's words.

He took a deep breath and replied, "I'm sorry for what happened a few days ago, Harvey. We've wronged you completely."

"We didn't think you'd still fight despite what happened!"

"We feel terribly guilty!"

"We asked you to come here to apologize and to discuss crushing our enemies tomorrow!"
