

Chapter 1487 Janet's Exam Results

After finishing breakfast, Johanna continued chatting with Janet, while Brandon followed Frank to his temporary office.

As soon as Frank closed the door, the expression on his face turned gloomy. He wanted to speak, but hesitated for a moment. Finally, after a few moments of contemplation, he said, "Janet's exam results have arrived..."

Noticing Frank struggle to find the right words to say, Brandon's heart skipped a beat. He immediately felt an ominous feeling welling up within him.

The room suddenly fell silent. The two men wore heavy, somber expressions and didn't utter a word.

After a while, Brandon closed his eyes and said in a serious tone, "If you have something to say, just say it. Tell me what's really going on with Janet."

"You have to be mentally prepared for it," Frank replied solemnly as he walked over to his desk and picked up the exam report.

Brandon nodded subtly. "I understand. Whether it's for my own benefit or not, there's no need to keep anything from me. I'd rather know the truth."

"You should take a look first," Frank said, handing the report to Brandon.

As Brandon glanced at the words "Examination Report" printed on the cover, he felt an overwhelming sense of nervousness that caused his hands to tremble slightly.

However, he knew that regardless of the outcome, he had to face the final results.

As Brandon scanned through the report, he struggled to comprehend the technical jargon and data presented. One thing, however, was clear: Janet's physical attributes differed significantly from those of an ordinary person.

Brandon took a deep breath, trying his best to maintain his composure. "How will these abnormal attributes affect Janet?"

Frank shook his head and replied, "I don't know yet. Although her physical attributes are different from those of others, they seem to have reached a new equilibrium. She's safe for now."

"For now?" Brandon's gaze grew intense as he locked eyes with Frank. "I don't find much comfort in that phrasing."

That choice of words filled him with unease.

Frank shrugged and replied, his palms meekly held out open before him. "This is the first time I'm seeing a condition like Janet's. I'll need to conduct further research and analysis to determine the specific cause of her physical abnormalities. The current medical equipment is too basic, so I can't perform any comprehensive examinations, let alone treat her."

Brandon listened in silence. The grip with which he held the examination report tightened as his expression grew darker.

He couldn't bear to imagine what he would do if something bad happened to Janet. 2

Furthermore, the thought of Janet enduring any kind of pain due to her physical abnormalities deeply troubled him.

His heart grew heavy with worry as all these thoughts ran through his mind.

Feeling an intense and cold aura emanating from Brandon, Frank couldn't help but feel nervous. "Brandon... Are you okay?"

"Let's return immediately and seek out the best medical team available. No matter the cost, we must find a way to cure Janet as soon as possible," Brandon replied, his gaze piercing and determined as he fixed his eyes on Frank.

With that, he turned around, ready to leave.

Frank hurriedly stopped him, with a tone of concern in his voice. "What are you going to do? Are you planning on disclosing Janet's health condition to her?"

Brandon abruptly stopped in his tracks.

"If you suddenly decide to return home after your serious injury, it'll definitely arouse her suspicion. You wouldn't want her discovering that there's something wrong with her health, would you?"

Brandon turned around and rubbed between his eyebrows wearily. "I didn't think it through."

Taking a look at the new bandage on Brandon's waist, Frank let out a sigh. "I'll take Janet's blood sample back for analysis. As for you, I'd advice that you return after you've recovered, in order to prevent the wound from reopening whilst you're on the road."

Brandon frowned and said nothing.

Brandon's concern for Janet had been unwavering from the moment Janet had gone missing to her current physical changes. As a third party, Frank couldn't help but look on sympathetically as he thought about the many challenges that the couple had encountered on their journey together.

"Don't worry," Frank said, as he offered Brandon some encouragement. "Although Jeremy is good at inventing drugs, there must be some pharmacist out there who's more knowledgeable than he is. No matter what kind of drugs he has used on Janet, we'll surely find a way to cure her."