Married At First Sight Chapter 3543 – “Don’t worry about the children. They are active and get plenty of exercise, so they lose weight quickly.”

Jane said, “Titus also gained weight for a while, but it was short-lived, and he lost it quickly.”

“Sonny is practicing martial arts too. As long as he doesn’t overeat, he won’t gain weight.”

“Serenity, Lilian is right. They all love to have fun. Even if I don’t invite them to join in, they would go on their own. You don’t have to feel like you owe me too many favors.”

Jane comforted Serenity, assuring her not to worry too much about the situation in Jensburg. She didn’t need to feel indebted just because Jane asked her brother and sister-in-law to go to Jensburg.

She was simply trying to find some fun for her brother and sister-in-law.

“Well, I’m not worried. I’m just waiting for my sister to come back for the New Year.” Serenity nodded gratefully.

Zachary had intentionally brought her here to help her make friends with Jane and others, with deep intentions. Now, she was reaping the benefits of Zachary’s planning.

The backers behind Jane and the others were very powerful.

As the eldest young lady of the York family, Serenity didn’t have much support except from her aunt, Audrey. However, the friends she made were all good to her and treated her as a true friend. When she encountered difficulties, her friends would step in one by one. If she didn’t back down, her friends would be her support, giving her a lot of strength.

Zachary had thought far ahead and was sincerely devoted to her. He had thought of everything and paved the way for her. It was a great honor to marry him in this life.

Thinking of Zachary’s kindness, Serenity wanted to fly to Jensburg immediately, but she restrained herself. As long as she was well and kept their child safe, that would be the best reward for him.

Soon, the three of them heard the laughter of children.

Titus came out with Sonny.

Both held windmills in their hands and ran together, watching as the windmills spun quickly.

Before Sonny came over, he went into his toy room and found the windmills he had received before, which were well-preserved. Ninety-nine percent of his windmills were gifts from Duncan.

Duncan didn't know how to coax children at first, but he liked Sonny very much and would often give him windmills.

Sonny's interest in windmills didn't last long. Duncan always gave him windmills, which Sonny accepted but rarely played with, keeping them all in his toy room.

Seeing that the windmills were intact, Sonny stuffed two of them into his small suitcase and brought them over to play with Titus.

Seeing the two little ones playing with windmills, Jane instinctively asked, "Who took them to buy windmills so soon?"

It wasn't that Titus didn't have windmills, but he would usually break them after playing for less than half a day.

Therefore, as long as Titus didn't ask for a windmill, Jane wouldn't buy him one. Titus was very destructive. No matter what he got, he would dismantle it. After taking it apart, he wanted to reassemble it himself, but he was still young. Even though he had strong hands-on skills, he couldn't play with the toys he reassembled, and sometimes he couldn't even put them back together.

Over time, the toys that everyone gave him were the kind that were difficult to dismantle, so he could only play with them properly.

"Sonny brought it here."

Serenity glanced at her nephew's small suitcase, recalling how she had seen the little guy stuff a windmill into it.

She smiled and said, "Sonny has the most windmills. Brother Duncan used to give him windmills all the time. Duncan liked Sonny very much, but he didn't know how to coax children. The first time he gave Sonny a windmill, Sonny liked it very much, so Duncan thought Sonny loved windmills the most."
