

Married At First Sight Chapter 3551

Married At First Sight Chapter 3551 – They all knew that the Farrell family would eventually belong to Kathryn, and their futures depended on her. Yet, they still hadn't figured out how to win her favor, treating her the same way they always had. It was as if they were blind and brainless.

After being scolded by Clarissa, Marco didn't dare say a word. She then instructed them to bring dinner to Kathryn after work.

Marco knew better than to disobey Clarissa, so he quickly called Holden, asking him to whip up a few dishes, pack them, and bring them to the hospital. The father and brothers went together to visit Kathryn.

But even Holden scolded them. He had advised his three sons to take their children back to his hometown to avoid the chaos within the Farrell family. But the sons only sent their children away, choosing to stay behind themselves.

With no other option, Holden also remained in Jensburg.

Clarissa knew the grandchildren had been sent back to Holden's hometown, but Holden kept quiet about it. He only instructed his daughters-in-law to let the grandchildren stay there for the New Year and not return to Jensburg too soon.

Holden suspected Clarissa's instructions carried a deeper message: the battle between Clarissa and her niece would conclude before the New Year. One of them would perish, and it wouldn't drag on into the next year.

Publicly and privately, Holden hoped Clarissa would win.

Even though Clarissa had been harsh to him, reducing him to a shadow of his former self, they had several children and many grandchildren. As long as Clarissa controlled the Farrell family, their descendants would live well. But if Clarissa lost, everything would revert to Audrey, and their family's future would be bleak.

With their current assets, they could live comfortably if managed well. But without Clarissa to clean up their messes, they'd quickly decline into poverty, and all Holden's efforts would have been in vain. The thought alone was enough to make him sick with worry.

Kathryn turned to Pedro and then addressed Holden and Marco, "Why shouldn't Pedro take care of me? He belongs to me—he's my man!"

Kathryn's voice was firm, "It's only natural that my people take care of me. There's nothing wrong with that."

The four were stunned into silence.

Did Kathryn really see Pedro as her man? Had something happened between them?

They had no idea.

Kathryn wasn't the type to be easily swayed by emotions. Many men had shown interest in her, but she never reciprocated. The only one she admired was Hayden.

But Hayden was the eldest daughter of the Queen family—a true woman. Even if Hayden were a man, his status and position would never allow him to marry into the Farrell family.

Kathryn's feelings for Hayden were destined to go unfulfilled.

“Brothers, you all have work to do. I've heard that Mom has been on a rampage at the company lately, always scolding people. You must be under a lot of pressure. I won't keep you here and risk you falling behind on your work and getting scolded by Mom.”

“No, no, no, we're fine. Taking care of you is more important than work,” Marco quickly replied.

For the past couple of days, Marco and his brothers preferred hiding out at the hospital, taking care of Kathryn, rather than staying at the company and facing Clarissa's wrath.

Kathryn said, “No, aside from Pedro, I don't trust any of you.”

Holden and the others couldn't hide their displeasure.
