

Married At First Sight Chapter 3591

Married At First Sight Chapter 3591 – Bianca smiled and said, “I don’t know how many years it has been since I last flew a kite. It seems that I haven’t flown a kite since I grew up, but I used to fly them often when I was a child. Thanks to you, I can relive the joy of my childhood today.”

Camryn handed her a kite and said, “I rarely fly kites. When I was a child, my brothers and sisters all had kites, but I didn’t. Even though kites weren’t expensive, my uncle and mother wouldn’t buy one for me. The nanny, who was the kindest to me, made me a kite, but it didn’t fly very high. I treasured it, but Carrie destroyed it after I had only played with it a few times. When I complained to my mother, she scolded both me and my aunt, forbidding her from ever making me another kite.”

“I didn’t have many toys. I only had the ones from before I was two years old. My father bought me a lot of fun toys and many beautiful dolls. My aunt said I loved dolls very much. After my father left, my mother gave all my toys away.”

“When Carrie was born, she got everything she wanted. I envied her so much. Sometimes I would secretly play with her toys. When she found out, she would cry and tell my mother that I had stolen them. My mother wouldn’t listen to my explanation and would just beat me.”

“She beat me very hard. After each beating, I would feel pain for several days. Sometimes the scars on my body took a long time to heal completely. I was so afraid of being beaten that I never touched Carrie’s toys again.”

“Trenton would give me his toys to play with, but I didn’t dare take them because I was afraid of being beaten by my mother. When my aunt was still around, she would save me. After my mother drove her away, no one saved me anymore. Everyone just listened to my mother. Trenton tried to protect me when he was very young, but he was just a child.”

Camryn’s heart still ached when she talked about her childhood. She thought she could speak about the past calmly, but when she did, she still felt very uncomfortable.

Maybe her biological mother was the most vicious mother in the world.

Even crueler than Snow White’s stepmother. Snow White’s mother was a stepmother, but hers was her biological mother. She was born after her mother carried her for ten months; she wasn’t adopted. And she looked a bit like her mother, but she never received any maternal love.

In the past, she didn’t understand and thought that all mothers were like hers.

When Carrie was born, she realized that her mother was only cruel to her. Her mother could be a very gentle person, but that gentleness wasn’t for her.

Even now, when she visits her mother in prison, her mother doesn't want to see her.

Her mother said, "Just pretend I was never born."

Camryn could blame or hate her, but her mother wouldn't care at all.

Her mother even said that if she had known she would fall into her hands, she would have strangled her at birth rather than let her live. She said that if it hadn't been for her uncle's request to keep her alive, he would have pretended to care because he didn't want people to say he killed his brother, seized his brother's property, slept with his brother's wife, and abused his brother's only daughter.

If her uncle hadn't pretended to care, her mother said she would have beaten her to death long ago.

Her mother also scolded her aunt for meddling in the family's affairs after marriage. If her aunt hadn't returned to visit her family, Camryn would have died long ago.

Yes, her own mother poisoned her and tried to kill her.

Her aunt sent her to the hospital, but she didn't die—though she was blinded.

Because of her aunt's intervention, although she became almost invisible in the Newman family, even worse than a servant, at least she wasn't beaten all the time. Carrie always caused trouble for her, but Camryn grew up and learned to protect herself.
