

Married At First Sight Chapter 3520

Married At First Sight Chapter 3520—“I think it’s the same person. They found a fake to impersonate Carrie, and then Mrs. Labbe appeared to dispel my suspicion. Their target seems to be Serenity, but they know I know Carrie best, so they had to involve me.”

If she was convinced, Serenity wouldn’t suspect anything because Camryn and Carrie were sisters.

“I just wanted to talk to Serenity and analyze it. I feel they’re playing a big game behind the scenes. There’s no rush. They’re not in a hurry, and neither are we. So I came over this morning, but didn’t expect Serenity to be out.”

Camryn added, “I also want a vacation to take a child out to play, but I don’t have a nephew.”

She had a younger sister, but Carrie was unmarried and childless, so she didn’t have a nephew yet. Even if Carrie got married and had a baby in the future, she might not let the baby be close to Camryn, the eldest aunt.

Camryn envied the relationship between Serenity and Sonny, but she couldn’t expect the same for herself.

Different people had different fates and fortunes. She herself didn’t have a child yet.

“During your annual leave, you can go on vacation and relax. When Sonny returns, you can discuss with Liberty about taking Sonny out for more fun,” the old lady suggested.

“But I don’t think Callum will be happy.”

Sonny was a super bright little light bulb.

Zachary didn’t like taking him along, always calling him a little light bulb. But with Liberty not in Wiltspoon, Sonny could only stay with Serenity. Zachary loved Sonny and could only spoil him.

If he really had to choose, he’d choose to be with Serenity.

Even if it were his own son, Zachary might leave him with the elders to take care of, so as not to affect his and Serenity’s happiness.

Camryn smiled. “He actually likes children very much.”

Her smile faded. “He married me, a medicine bottle. I don’t know how long he has to wait before becoming a father.”

The old lady didn't like Camryn belittling herself. She stopped, looked at her seriously, and said, "Camryn, grandma doesn't like you talking about yourself like that. You're not a medicine bottle. You were victimized and deceived.

Don't talk about yourself that way again. Doctor Carden said if you take care of yourself for two or three years, you can be a mother. It's not that you can't have children. Even if you really can't, what does it matter? As long as you and Callum are truly in love, you can be happy for the rest of your lives. There's no such pressure in our family. Don't put too much pressure on yourself."

Camryn was deeply moved. She felt her late father must have blessed her from heaven, leading her to meet the old lady who paired her with Callum, bringing her today's happiness.

She had health issues, but the York family didn't despise her.

She was blind for ten years.

The York family still accepted her. As her mother-in-law said, as long as she could spend money, nothing else mattered.

"Grandma, I won't say that about myself again. You're right. I'm not sick. I was tricked."

Camryn quietly wiped the corners of her eyes.

She was unfortunate. Her biological mother treated her worse than a stepmother. Her father died when she was two.

She grew up in a hostile environment, with a mother who tried to kill her.

But she was also lucky. Everyone she met was kind, her husband was considerate, and her in-laws were open-minded.

Now, her life felt like a miracle.
