

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1789

Chapter 1789

Thomas had told him to wait a few days in Cansington for his father to show up. After he met with his father and asked about his mother, he would leave Cansington with Thea and travel around the world. "Alright, then. I won't send you off."

After James bid farewell to Cynthia, he contacted Maxine.

Maxine was still in Cansington and had not returned to the Capital.

As a wise woman, she knew James and Thea would get remarried after Thea recovered her memories. Thea had always wanted to live in seclusion.

Now that Sol was in peace, there was a high chance James would remarry Thea and live in seclusion with her.

She had been waiting for James to say goodbye.

Thus, she was very calm upon receiving James' call.

"Alright. I'll head out right now."

Maxine hung up the phone and headed to where she had agreed to meet with James.

Their meeting place was in the city square.

James sat on a chair in the square and smoked a cigarette.

Click! Clack! Click! Clack!

High heels could be heard approaching him.

Hearing the footsteps, James raised his head.

It was Maxine, who had come to meet him.

She was dressed in white and had long, chestnut-colored hair. She looked cool as a cucumber upon seeing James.

Maxine walked over and called out sweetly, "James."

"Maxine, I'm here to say goodbye."

James went straight to the point.

“Mhm.”

Maxine gently nodded as she had already expected it.

She looked at James and asked, “Are you leaving with Thea?”

“Mhm.”

James said, “The country and its people are in peace. There probably won’t be any significant problems in the ancient martial world. Thus, I plan to live a leisurely and peaceful life with Thea in seclusion.

“Congratulations.” Maxine smiled brightly.

“Thank you for all the help you’ve provided me in the past. Without you, Sol would’ve never recovered so quickly. The new King would never have succeeded to the title so smoothly without your help either.”

Maxine gently waved her hand and interrupted James, “You don’t need to thank me. I’ve done everything willingly.”

“Huff.” James sighed helplessly.

James was naturally aware of Maxine’s feelings and knew that she had been causing trouble behind the scenes. However, he chose to look past them.

“I hope we meet again. If there’s nothing else, I’ll be leaving for the Capital first.”

Maxine waved goodbye to James, turned, and left.

After she left, she returned to her villa in Cansington.

Inside the villa, she held onto the Dragon Essence in her left hand and the dragon blood in her right hand.

She had obtained a piece of the essence and some dragon blood on the island.

Maxine opened her mouth and swallowed the dragon’s blood.

Some of the blood dripped down from the corner of her lips and stained her fair neck red.

At that moment, her beautiful face was grim, and the blood on her lips made her look terrifying.

After swallowing the dragon’s blood, resentment rose in her heart.

She had been silently doing so much for so long.

Ultimately, she got nothing in return except a word of gratitude.

“If I can’t have him, no one can.”

Maxine looked gloomy and horrifying.

“Since I can’t have him, I’ll get rid of him with my own hands.”

After taking the dragon’s blood, Maxine entered a state of insanity.

She was dissatisfied with how things ended. She was full of resentment. All kinds of negative emotions took root in her heart.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1790

Chapter 1790

One by one, James bid farewell to everyone.

Then, he went to see Callan and said his goodbyes.

After that, he met up with the Blithe King and had a few drinks.

In one day, he had settled everything.

Now, he had nothing else to do.

He had never felt so relaxed before. Feeling at ease made him much happier.

Henry carried a suitcase down the stairs of the House of Royals. He smiled and greeted James, who was sitting in the living room smoking a cigarette. “James, are you not leaving yet? Whitney and I are leaving on a trip. By the way, where are you two planning to go? We’re going to Dream City first.”

James looked at Henry and Whitney who were approaching. Then, he said with a smile, “I’ll stay in Cansington for a few more days. You two go ahead. As for our destination, I don’t know yet. We might not even have a destination and will just go with the flow.”

“Alright. Goodbye.”

Henry carried the suitcase out and left with Whitney in hand.

After the two left, Thea held James’ hand and looked at him. She asked seriously, “Are you really willing to give up everything you have now?”

James replied with a smile, "Nothing is holding me back. This is the life I've always wanted, and it's finally about to come true. By the way, is there anywhere you want to go?"

Thea thought for a while and said, "Do you remember the small village we lived in last time? I want to go there again."

Back when James was crippled, Thea bought a village and a lot of land.

The two had stayed there for a while.

"Yeah, I remember. Then, that'll be our destination."

James nodded.

Now, he was fine with going anywhere.

Anywhere was home with the woman he loved by his side.

Thea's face was full of joy.

Afterward, James stayed in the House of Royal for a few days.

Three days later, James appeared at the House of Royals.

Thea warmly greeted Thomas and served him tea.

Thomas gently waved his hand and said, "Thea, you don't have to do that much. Sit down first."

James looked at Thomas and asked, "Grandpa, where's Dad?"

Suddenly, Thomas clapped his hands.

At that moment, the door was pushed open.

A man who looked around thirty or forty years old walked into the house. He was dressed in a white suit and had short hair. He looked very energetic.

"Dad."

Seeing the person walking in, James immediately stood up excitedly.

He always thought his father was dead.

Finally, they were reunited.

Nicholas walked over, sat down on the sofa, and looked at James with admiration. He praised, "Not bad, James."

"Although I haven't been in Cansington, I've heard all about you."

James looked at Nicholas and asked, "Dad, where have you been all these years?"

Nicholas replied, "I've been abroad. After faking my death more than ten years ago, I left and settled abroad. The rest of our family are all abroad and are living well."

"I haven't just stayed idle over the years. I've been laying out our forces abroad. I already have many consortiums under my control and have become a strong force abroad."

"Haha." While talking, he laughed.

"Now, the dragon has been killed, and the Cadens' era is coming soon."

"With Dad, Thea, and you, the Cadens are now full of powerhouses. We, the Cadens, are about to rise to the top. We'll establish our own country and create a prosperous dynasty!"

As soon as Nicholas appeared, he spouted a lot of ambitious words.

It was similar to the things Thomas had mentioned to James before. James fell into silence.