Married At First Sight Chapter 2745-Besides, Duncan was really kind to Liberty and Sonny, and he treated Sonny as his own.

When Liberty rejected Duncan and said she didn't want to remarry, she was just worried that she would get into trouble again if she remarried, and she was also worried that Sonny would be bullied.

But Duncan helped her clear all the obstacles. The Lewis family accepted her and looked forward to her marrying Duncan. There was no need to worry about Sonny being bullied. Duncan loved Sonny more than Hank.

If she wanted to marry again, Duncan was the best candidate.

Serenity said, "Brother Duncan is also afraid of hurting you. He wants to give you happiness, not drag you down. You're waiting for him. I believe brother Duncan will be able to stand up soon."

Liberty said, "I know, so I wait for him; no matter how many years, I wait. While waiting, I work hard to develop my career."

However, Liberty could only rely on the investment from the three wealthy families in Wiltspoon to provide her with sponsorship and support.

But she was not without her benefits.

Not to mention the benefits, just the experience accumulated from it couldn't be exchanged for money.

Serenity said, "Sister, come on! You're the best, and I have always been proud of you."

Liberty smiled. "Seren, I'll do your best."

Serenity said, "Sister, let's stop talking. You hurry up and catch up on your sleep. If anything happens in the future, you must tell me. If you don't let me know, I will worry. If you let me know, we will help find a way to solve the problem, and everyone will feel better."

Liberty said, "I know, I know."

After the sisters ended the call, Liberty wanted to continue sleeping but couldn't.

She got up.

After washing up, she changed her clothes and got ready to go out for something to eat.

After ordering this, there was no breakfast available in the buffet restaurant on the first floor of the hotel, so she could only go outside to solve the breakfast problem.

After returning to the hotel after breakfast, Liberty felt her head still hurt, so she took out a small pack of pain reliever medicine from her suitcase. In the past, when she had a headache, she would just eat a pack of pain reliever medicine. The people at the pharmacy told her that this medicine had side effects, but she was used to it.

It's not something she takes regularly. No matter how severe the side effects were, if she only took a small packet for a few months, it wouldn't have any impact.

"Ring ring ring..."

The phone rang again.

She checked the caller's ID and answered the call as she sat down in a chair.

"Liberty." Duncan's gentle voice came over.

"Um." She responded warmly.

After hearing her voice, Duncan felt relieved.

He just received a call from his bodyguard and found out what Liberty went through last night.

Even if the bodyguard said that Liberty was fine and the dead person was a bodyguard of the Farrell family, Duncan would still be scared.

He had already made arrangements. He would fly to Jensburg today. He would go to Liberty's side to see her and make sure that she was really intact, so that he could truly rest assured.

He wouldn't stay in Jensburg for too long; he just looked at her.

After all, he has limited mobility now. If he stayed for a long time, not only would he be unable to help her, but he would actually be a drag on her.

The last thing Duncan wanted was to drag down the one he loved.

"Duncan, I'm fine."

Liberty knew why Duncan called.

In addition to Duncan, she guessed Audrey was also going to call.

The six bodyguards accompanying her were from the York family, the Stone family, and the Lewis family. Her every move in Jensburg was known to those three families.

Married at First Sight Chapter 2746-The mission of the bodyguards was to protect Liberty, not to monitor her, but if their real boss wanted to ask questions, they would not hide it.

Unless she was in danger and something happened, the bodyguards would take the initiative to tell the real boss.

Duncan: "As long as it's okay, it's okay. I was so frightened when I heard it. It scared me to death. Liberty, I'll go to Jensburg in a moment. I'll be there before two o'clock in the afternoon."

Liberty: "Mr. Lewis, I'm fine; you don't need to make this trip."

It was too inconvenient for him to go out.

Duncan: "I want to see you with my own eyes; make sure you are intact; and make sure there is nothing wrong with you; then I can feel completely at ease."

Liberty: "I'm really fine. You can ask them. We're all fine. It's inconvenient for you to go out, so don't run so far."

Duncan insisted: "But I miss you too. I really want to take a good look at you."

Liberty could not refute.

“Then you have to be careful. If you feel uncomfortable, don’t insist. Mr. Lewis, we all need to take care of ourselves, you know.”

Duncan said gently, “I’m not a three-year-old child. If I feel uncomfortable, I won’t go out. Don’t worry, I’ll be fine. See you in the afternoon.”

“Okay, see you in the afternoon.” Liberty hung up the phone on her own initiative.

Thinking about it, Liberty felt that it was a kind of happiness to be taken into consideration.

Duncan gave her something that her ex-husband had never given her.

Perhaps Duncan’s true love for her was true. Her ex-husband once had true love for her, but later it was mixed with too many impurities, and eventually they separated.

Liberty stayed at the Fortress Hotel, which was one of the York family’s properties in Jensburg and which Kevin was responsible for.

It was easy for her to see Kevin.

After eating a small packet of medicine, her headache symptoms disappeared. She picked up her mobile phone, got up, and walked out of the room she lived in. She took the elevator to the top floor of the hotel and came to the door of Kevin’s office. She raised her hand and knocked on the door.

“Come in.” Kevin’s voice came from inside.

Liberty pushed open the door and entered.

Seeing that it was Liberty, Kevin put down his pen, stood up, walked around the desk, walked towards her, and said as he walked, “Sister Liberty, you’re up. Did you sleep well last night?”

Liberty was a white-collar woman in the workplace before her marriage and was considered a capable person, but the struggles in the workplace were nothing compared to life and death matters.

Kevin was worried that Liberty would be frightened and leave a psychological shadow.

He invited Liberty to sit down on the sofa, then went to pour Liberty a glass of warm water, and then went to get some food.

“Kevin, there’s no need to take it. I just finished breakfast, and I’m full.”

Kevin still brought her some fresh fruit. He asked, “Sister Liberty, did you just finish your breakfast?”

He looked at the time and saw it was past ten in the morning.

Liberty said, “I have to say that what happened last night gave me a great shock and affected my sleep. It was almost dawn before I fell asleep. Your sister-in-law called and woke me up. It was already past breakfast when I came downstairs. At that time, I went out to eat.

I was really frightened by what happened last night. It lasted just one night. It’s okay now. I’m afraid what I will experience in the future will be even more cruel. This world was originally a world of the weak and the strong.”

Liberty picked up the cup of warm water, took two sips, and asked Kevin, “Have you ever asked about what happened to the Farrell family after we left? What happened to Shiloh and Holden? What happened next?”

Kevin said, “I have asked people to inquire about it a long time ago, and Jim also went to inquire about it.”

Jim was the most powerful bodyguard who followed Zachary. Zachary arranged for him to follow Liberty to Jensburg. Liberty felt at ease when he was doing things.

Zachary understood the character of Liberty, so he specially arranged for Jim to follow Liberty and fly to Jensburg.
