Married At First Sight Chapter 2787-Liberty didn't know how to answer the question, and she could only hug Duncan silently.

After a while, Duncan gently pushed her away and said warmly, "Go back and rest. It's very late. Good night."

"Good night. You should go to bed early. You have to go back to Wiltspoon tomorrow."

After the two said good night to each other, Liberty left Duncan's room. Duncan took her out of the room in a wheelchair and watched her enter the next room before closing the door.

There was nothing more to say all night.

The next day, after Duncan had breakfast, he left the Fortress Hotel by car, with Liberty seeing him off.

Liberty did not follow him to the airport but only sent him to the car and stood at the door of the hotel to watch him leave.

Eventually, she will say goodbye to him as he travels thousands of miles away. She will be less willing to part from him if she sends him off too far.

It wasn't until the car Duncan was sitting in was out of sight that Liberty led the bodyguard team to the two cars she was using temporarily.

Duncan returned to Wiltspoon, and she had to continue busy with her affairs.

When they were busy, time passed very quickly.

It seemed that the genius was bright.

In a blink of an eye, it's evening again.

Kevin didn't know that Hayden would not return to the company in the afternoon. As usual, he drove to Queen Enterprise in the evening to wait for Hayden to get off work.

Then they went to dinner together.

Hayden was very busy and didn't have much time for him. Every day's meal time was the best time for him and Hayden to cultivate their relationship.

The car drove into Queen Enterprise and stopped at the same place. Kevin took the bouquet from the passenger seat and got out of the car.

He met Hugh at the door of the office building, who was walking out.

Hugh was also talking with several company executives as they walked.

Seeing Kevin, the group stopped.

"Why do you still come to the company?" Hugh asked immediately.

Kevin was a little puzzled by the question, so he asked him, "Why can't I come to your company?"

He came every day.

Could Hugh still drive him out?

Hugh dared to kick him out, so he immediately called Donald and complained to him.

The president of Queen Enterprise was Hayden, but most of the company's shares were still in the hands of Director Donald, who was the top leader of the company.

What was the purpose of Hayden instructing the people in the security department not to let Kevin enter the Queen Enterprise?

When Donald came, he gave Kevin special privileges and allowed Kevin to enter and leave the Queen Enterprise freely. Even Hayden, the president, had no choice.

Hugh chuckled. "My brother is not in the company, but you still come to Queen's. Are you looking for me? Are you giving this bouquet of flowers to me? Come on, come on, hold it for me. Such a big bouquet of flowers, it's hard for you to hold them, so if you give them to me, let me hold them myself."

As Hugh spoke, he reached over to take the large bouquet of roses from Kevin's hand.

He also said, "I have never received a bouquet from a handsome guy in my life. Kevin, you have such good taste. This bouquet of flowers you bought is so beautiful. I have to take a photo and send it to Moments to show off. For a moment, let my confidante learn from this and send me flowers, and they should send such a big bunch."

Kevin slapped Hugh's hand away.

The senior executives watched this scene in silence, all muttering in their hearts: Have Mr. Donald Queen's two sons been turned over by Kevin?

Married At First Sight Chapter 2788-Hugh was doing much better. At least Hugh often hangs out with his confidante and even brings a few confidantes with him when eating, drinking, and having fun. Kevin has really ruined Mr. Queen.

Even if Kevin is very good and comes from the York family, the largest wealthy family in Wiltspoon, so what?

Homos*xuality was still not recognized by the secular world in Wiltspoon.

"What a wonderful thought. This flower is not for you. Your brother is not in the company." Kevin asked, "He went out?"

Hugh was not angry, even after his hand was slapped away. He deliberately said to Kevin, "It seems that you have been pestering my brother every day, but you still haven't tightened your grip. You don't even know where my brother has gone. My brother didn't reply in the afternoon. You don't know the company either."

Kevin really didn't know.

He only knew that Hayden told him to pick her up in the evening and accompany her to tonight's banquet.

The banquet that Hayden attended tonight was held in the mansion of a wealthy family in Jensburg, not in a hotel, so Kevin came over as soon as he finished his work.

He didn't even change his clothes, and he didn't need to. He wore a suit every day, and he kept wearing a suit every day.

A naturally handsome man like him can easily become the focus of the crowd, even if he is dressed casually.

“Looking at your expression, I can tell that my brother didn’t say anything to you. Haha, Kevin, you have been pestering my brother for more than half a year and forcing him to become a homos*xual. But now it seems that my brother is obsessed with you. My feelings are just mediocre.”

After saying that, Hugh patted Kevin on the shoulder sympathetically and said with a smile, “I don’t have time, so I won’t chat with you. You can go in or leave; whatever you want, goodbye.”

Hugh really left Kevin behind, took the senior executives away, and continued to talk about work matters while walking.

Was Kevin someone who his brother-in-law could hit so easily? He immediately turned around and walked back to the front desk, asking the receptionist, who had not yet gotten off work, “Did Mr. Queen really not return to the company this afternoon? Or did Vice President Queen lie to me? “

The receptionist said, “Mr. Queen did not return to the company in the afternoon.”

Kevin said, Oh, and asked again, “He didn’t say where he was going? Is he going to discuss business?”

When he sent the message to Hayden, Hayden didn’t say he was going to discuss business.

The receptionist kept smiling and replied, “We don’t know Mr. Queen’s whereabouts. Mr. York, you’d better ask Vice President Queen, or call Mr. Queen yourself.”

They are just the front desk, not Mr. Queen’s secretaries. How could they know that Mr. Queen has so many schedules?

“Thanks.”

Unable to ask anything from the front desk, Kevin walked out of the office building holding a bouquet of flowers.

After returning to the car, he put the bouquet back on the passenger seat, then took out his mobile phone and called Hayden.

Hayden quickly answered his call. After hearing Hayden's voice, Kevin breathed a sigh of relief.

At least, it could prove that Hayden was not running away from him; she was just too busy at work and never told him what she did.

Kevin laughed, feeling that he cared too much about Hayden. After Hugh said a few words, he was worried that he would be abandoned by Hayden. He felt that he had never really entered Hayden's heart.

"Hayden, where are you? I came to your company and met Hugh. He said that you didn't return to the company in the afternoon."

Hayden was still practicing walking in high heels. She thought it was very simple—just walking. It was indeed not difficult, but she was not used to it.

After taking two steps in the high heels, she took them off and told her mother that she would rather go barefoot than wear high heels. They were uncomfortable and not as comfortable as her leather shoes.

Mrs. Queen said to her, "When you wear an evening dress, you must wear high heels. I have never seen rich ladies in our circle wearing evening dresses with leather shoes."

Therefore, she could only practice walking in high heels. She took off her high heels countless times and walked back with her shoes.

Mrs. Queen stared at her again and again, almost turning her into a wasp's nest.
