

Chapter 131 Clarification

Pausing momentarily, Tyrone finally said, "Our lives were just incompatible. I was engrossed in my double degrees in college, with studies monopolizing my time. I could hardly find time for Galilea. Once I joined the workforce, my job became the center of my universe, sidelining her needs. Our arguments escalated until we decided to part ways."

His reasoning sounded reasonable enough.

"It seems that professional commitments interfered. Ms. Clifford is an actress and often disappears for months at a stretch for shoots. Relationships often suffer due to the lack of shared time. This is understandable. Considering you're the CEO of Blakely Group, Mr. Blakely, your schedule must be pretty hectic. How does Ms. Chavez respond to this?"

Tyrone wore a smile. "She is equally engrossed in her work. We often find ourselves working overtime together, our rhythms synchronizing."

"So, the internet chatter about Ms. Chavez entering Blakely Group through your influence is baseless?"

Tyrone simply shook his head, asserting, "We never pull strings in Blakely Group."

"We've heard that Ms. Clifford has been collaborating with Blakely Group since her return from abroad. Mr. Blakely, did your decision to work with her stem from personal reasons?"

Originally, Darlene was appointed as the spokesperson, but the torch was passed onto Galilea later.

"Yes. She wished to return and pursue her career at home, so I extended my assistance."

"I'm aware that not all couples manage to stay friends post breakup, even the peaceful ones. On her return, Ms. Clifford sought your assistance. Have you been in touch all this while? Don't you worry about Ms. Chavez's reactions?"

"I'm a businessman, and Galilea's father is my business associate. Our paths crossed occasionally post our breakup. I harbor no regret in assisting her. However, I do think I could have done so more appropriately, maintaining a healthy distance. I failed to consider how my wife might interpret this, leading to a series of unjust accusations against her. So, I owe her an apology." Looking earnestly into the camera, Tyrone confessed, "Sabrina, I'm sorry."

"Is this the reason you agreed to this interview? It seems that you value her very much, Mr. Blakely."

"Yes. She is as essential to me as air. I can't imagine my existence without her."

As Tyrone met the camera's gaze with a calm demeanor, a sense of relief washed over him.

At times, rumors remained mere rumors, and only those directly involved held the true knowledge.

Tyrone's feelings for Galilea were not as the rumors suggested.

As their relationship crumbled and after witnessing Galilea's ordeal, he felt compelled to make amends for a lifetime.

Had she not ended things, it would have been her standing beside him today.

But life didn't entertain ifs.

Galilea initiated the breakup, and he ended up with Sabrina, someone he would forsake his work for, just to spend time with, and someone he deeply cared for.

He regretted causing Galilea's accident, not helping her. His remorse was over not realizing who he truly loved earlier, causing Sabrina pain in the process.

Given a chance to rewrite history, he would still support Galilea's career, but refrain from any private interactions. He would ensure Sabrina was privy to everything.

"Mr. Blakely, you appear to be deeply in love with your wife."

Simultaneously with the interview's release, Blakely Group's official account published a list of individuals they planned to sue and even revealed a photo of Sabrina and Tyrone's marriage certificate. The comments section was flooded with blessings.

"Did you see the video? Finally, he has addressed the rumors. I bet Galilea feels quite foolish now. I'm drafting a tweet. Her fans won't dare to retaliate now!" Bettie texted Sabrina.

Sabrina was left speechless.

Not only did Bettie tweet, but she also shot down Galilea's fans who used to comment on her posts.

"How does that feel?"

"Don't pretend to be dead. Apologize!"

"I told you Sabrina is innocent!"

"Hey, you're on the list!"

Next, she texted Sabrina again.

"She is as essential to me as air. I can't imagine my existence without her. He's somewhat of a romantic."

Sabrina remained silent, offering no response.

Tyrone was always a master at portraying emotions, having fooled her multiple times. She wouldn't be fooled again.

"But Sabrina, don't let his sweet words trick you! He's still protecting Galilea!"

Sabrina discerned Tyrone's intentions from his response. He took all the blame upon himself in an attempt to absolve Galilea.

If Sabrina remained unaware of what had happened between Tyrone and Galilea, she might share the same thoughts as Bettie.

However, knowing their history, Tyrone's response was predictable.

Had Tyrone shifted all the blame onto Galilea, Sabrina would have lost all respect for him.

"I understand. Don't worry."

It was evident that Tyrone's response was heartfelt, though it arrived a tad late.

Sabrina held no regret about initiating the divorce.

Following the video's release, there was an outpouring of support for Sabrina. Many people expressed their sympathy for her and criticized the media for fabricating and propagating false rumors. Some even wished them well.

"I suspected Tyrone and Sabrina might be a couple, but Galilea's fans were nothing but trolls!"

"Where are those who were clamoring for Sabrina to apologize?"

"I recall some trolls even defaming and cursing Sabrina's father. Such vile and deranged people."

"Sabrina graduated from the same university as Tyrone. She's really badass. She's a remarkable woman."

"I stand with you, Sabrina. The media are detestable. Not a single one bothered to uncover the truth."

"He says he should have maintained a distance from Galilea? How did he manage to make cheating seem so trivial?"

"I absolutely detest Galilea's fans; they're nothing more than a mob of trolls supporting a home-wrecker."

"I'm a Galilea fan. I wish to apologize to Sabrina. I believed the rumors and made derogatory remarks about her. I am truly sorry."

"It would be wonderful if all of Galilea's fans could be as rational and reasonable as you are."

"From this video, I infer Tyrone to be a true gentleman."

"Gentleman? He's confessed to betraying his wife. How can such a person be deemed a gentleman?"

"Indeed. Galilea was aware of his marital status and yet she pursued him."

"What a bitch! Was she oblivious to the fact that Sabrina was enduring all the blame and slander on her behalf? She didn't utter a single word in defense."

Among the people who previously targeted Sabrina, only a handful admitted their error and apologized to her, while many feigned ignorance.

They refused to acknowledge their role in spreading the slander.

Some made comments on the posts spreading rumors about Sabrina.

"Sabrina isn't the home-wrecker, you rumormonger!"

"Where's your apology? Oh, you're being sued? Excellent!"

Certain bloggers had erased their posts, but people had preserved the screenshots. "Someone's conscience seems to be pricking them."

